Acheson Fights Drive to Cut Arms Aid

Hunt Dealt Mostly With 'Hill,' Grindle Tells Inquiry

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

James V. Hunt, central figure in the Senate's investigation of "5 per centers," was pictured yesterday as a dealer in influence who could go to the White House at any time, but who got most of his business from Capitol Hill.

A 29-year-old manufacturer, Paul D. Grindle of Framingham, Mass., told a Senate subcommittee how he came here to retain Hunt to help him win Government contracts. It was agreed, he said, that he was to pay Hunt 5 per cent of any contract.

Grindle quoted Hunt as saying: "I have only one thing to sell, and that is influence. My influence is based on my reputation, and you will find that my reputation is impeccable.

Brags of Vaughan Friendship

"General Vaughan is Harry Truman's closest friend, and I am one of General Vaughan's closest friends."

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, who has known the President for 30 years, is the White House military aide.

Grindle, speaking from notes, further quoted Hunt as saying that, thanks to his close friendship with Vaughan, he "could go and did go to the White House at any time."

The testimony swung to Capitol Hill when Grindle began quoting Hunt on the difficulties that confronted small businessmen in their efforts to get Government contracts. He said that Hunt told him these small businessmen often went to their Congressmen to complain about the red tape.

Offered "Prestige Party"

"He said that 90 per cent of his business came from Congress," Grindle said.

Hunt, a former lieutenant colonel in the Army, was a liaison between the Quartermaster Department of the Army and Congress before he set up his own business as a "management counselor."

A smile traveled around the committee room when Grindle told how Hunt offered to put on a "prestige party" for him here in Washington.

"He said that certain Senators would be present at the party," the witness said.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) said he was curious to know if there was a party, and if any Senators were present.

"No, sir," said Grindle, amidst laughter, "we never got around to the party."

He said that Hunt told him that he had "never paid anybody in the White House or Congress since he'd been in Washington."

Grindle was a reporter on The New York Herald Tribune in 1945-

1st Negro Named In 103 Years To AMA Policy Unit

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Negro physician has been named to the policymaking body of the American Medical Association for the first time since the group's founding, 103 years ago.

The new member of the AMA House of Delegates is Dr. Peter H. Murray, director of the department of gynecology at Harlem Hospital, New York. He was elected by the New York State Medical Society.

Dr. George F. Lull, Chicago, secretary and general manager of the association, announced the election. Dr. Murray will be seated at the annual AMA meeting in San Francisco in June, 1950.

Beauty-Talent Title Captured By Brunette as Tears Flow

The Washington Post
MARY JANE HAYES
Chosen Miss Washington . . .

Mary Jane Hayes, 19, of 4127 New Hampshire ave. nw., became "Miss Washington" last night 'midst tears and a happy, incredulous "Oh, I won!"

"I never thought I'd win," she said, when told backstage that she had won the contest, held on the stage of the Capitol Theater.

Miss Hayes, a brunette, will be the District's official entry in the "Miss America" beauty-talent contest September 5 to 11 at Atlantic City.

She won first place in the contest, sponsored by Station WWDC FM and AM, in connection with eight other finalists chosen from 81 contestants.

Lois Agee, 21, of 3411 30th st. nw., 5 feet, 3 inches tall, and also brown-haired, was named runner-up. Judges did not name a third-place winner.

Contestants were judged for beauty of face, beauty of figure, talent, charm and personality. The nine judges included members of Congress and members of the advertising, sports and newspaper worlds.

Miss Hayes, a 1948 graduate of Coolidge High School, has been studying piano for 13 years, and would like to study in New York in preparation for a career on the concert stage.

Daughter of William E. Hayes, chief engineer at the Navy Department's Bureau of Ordinance, and Mrs. Hayes, the new "Miss Washington" is studying modeling at the Phyllis Bell Studios. She has done some professional modeling. She is the first pianist ever to win the local contest.

A hazel-eyed girl, she is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weight 128 pounds.

Average Pay Raises of $113 For 850,000 Move Up in House

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

A bill to raise the average salary of the 850,000 Federal and District classified employes by $113.57 a year was approved yesterday by the Murray Subcommittee of the House Civil Service Committee. It's slated to get the okay of the full committee on Thursday.

The measure, sponsored by Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.), provides an average increase of $125 in the first four grades; an average of $100 in grades five through eight, and irregular increases for the next 10 grades. His bill would merge the 31 CAF, P, and SP grades into a new General Service Schedule of 18 grades, with a salary range of from $2186 to $15,000. The estimated cost of the bill is 100 million dollars a year.

The Murray bill differs from the classified pay bill now before the Senate in many other features. For example, it would not overhaul the present efficiency rating system; it does not provide a salary differential for employes in hazardous jobs, and it would not require agencies to set up committees to reward employes and supervisors for outstanding work. The Senate bill carries such provisions.

The provision to allow the Civil Service Commission to pay employes up to the middle of the grade for labor-short jobs was knocked out of the House bill. The

$300,000 Fire Wrecks Plant In Alexandria

A three-alarm fire swept through the National Electronics Laboratories at 200 King st., Alexandria, late yesterday afternoon causing damage that may exceed $300,000.

The flames gutted three floors of the four-story building, housing an estimated $100,000 worth of laboratory equipment and $150,000 in nearly completed materials being prepared on contract for the Army and Navy.

Frank Mallinson, president of the company, said he believed his own equipment as well as that for the armed forces was destroyed.

The company manufactures testing and laboratory equipment for use in electronics and conducts its own experiments in the development of radio electronics products.

Firemen from four Alexandria companies battled two hours to bring the blaze under control and to prevent its spread to adjacent buildings.

Among nine persons slightly injured were Firemen Rae Edmonson of Company No. 3, and J. E. Dolly of No. 2, both treated for smoke inhalation, and Mrs. Anne Magnis of the Ladies Auxiliary, who was cut on the left hand by flying glass while serving cold drinks to the firemen.

The first alarm was reported at 4:50 p. m., two minutes after the office had closed. Subsequent alarms were reported at 5:20 p. m. and 5:35 p. m. It was brought under control at 7 p. m.

The fire, only two blocks from the Alexandria water front, sent huge clouds of black and yellow smoke rolling out over the Potomac to the Maryland shore.

Several thousand persons who gathered to watch the fire were driven two blocks away by the acrid smoke.

Smoke from the fire was also

Clark May Leave Judge Suggestions Up to McGrath

Attorney General Tom Clark said last night he probably will make no recommendations for the 27 new Federal Court posts before he quits the Justice Department for the Supreme Court.

"I'll probably let McGrath send them over," he said, referring to Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) who was named to succeed him as Attorney General.

Included in the 27 Federal bench jobs created by Congress are three in the Court of Appeals here and three others in District Court.

Recommendations sent by the Attorney-General to the White House usually are approved by the President. They are subject to Senate confirmation.

In Fertile Period

Studies Indicate Timing Is Key to Baby Sex Choice

Durham, N. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—Scientific evidence that Mr. and Mrs. may be able to choose between having a boy or a girl baby has been found in the Duke University department of surgery.

The choice has nothing to do with surgery, and is something everyone can try without annoyance. The choice is not certain but in the Duke studies the percentage is slightly over 25 in favor of having the sex you want.

A difficult part of the trick is for a woman to know for sure her fertile period, which is a matter of two or three days only, once a month.

In the Duke studies, conceptions in the early part of the fertile period favor female births. Conceptions late in the period seem to show a preponderance of males.

The Duke studies were made by Doctors Deryl Hart and James D. Moody, and are reported in the Annals of Surgery, a Philadelphia medical publication.

The idea comes from a number of facts collected by medical scientists in the last decade.

One is the surprising results of 9489 artificial inseminations. The usual ratio in human births is 105 males to 100 females. But in these inseminations there were 5676 males. In artificial insemination, fairly exact knowledge of the fertile period is essential. Whether

Senate Votes Europe Aid Of 5.9 Billion

Occupation Costs Are Included; Measure Goes To Conference

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 63 to 7, the Senate last night passed the Administration's $5,797,724,000 appropriation bill to meet the cost of the European Recovery Program and pay United States occupation costs abroad during the coming year.

Final action came after more than two weeks of bitter debate during which Administration forces beat back all important amendments except a committee-sponsored 10 per cent cut.

The bill now goes to a joint Senate-House conference committee to reconcile the differences in the measures adopted by each body. Senate conferees were named promptly last night and the House is expected to act today to speed final action.

Those Voting Nay

Voting against the bill were Senators Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.); William E. Jenner (R., Ind.); James P. Kem (R., Mo.); William Langer (R., N. Dak.); George W. Malone (R., Nev.); John J. Williams (R., Del.) and Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.).

Final passage came after the Senate had twice knocked down an amendment by Kem frankly aimed at Great Britain which would have denied ECA funds to any country nationalizing basic industries.

The first test came with a vote of 50 to 21 to sustain Vice President Alben W. Barkley's ruling of last week that the amendment was legislation on an appropriation bill and therefore out of order.

Kem then appealed to the Senate to suspend its rules so the amendment could be approved. The proposal would have required a two-thirds vote to carry, but was defeated, 49 to 24.

Threatened to Resign

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman had protested proposals to attach strings to the program and at one time threatened to resign if not given sufficient funds and freedom to operate the program as contemplated by the Administration.

No effort was made to restore the cut of $674,820,000 ordered by the Senate Appropriations Committee. The committee had trimmed $569,820,000 from ECA, $5,000,000 from Greek-Turkish Aid, and $100,000,000 from the overseas occupation program.

The major point of difference between the House and Senate bills lies in the money figure.

The House voted $3,568,470,000 to ECA for the current year—but agreed the money could be spent in 10 and one-half months if necessary. The Senate voted $3,628,380,000 for ECA but for a full 12-month program with no authority to spend it in a shorter time.

The Senate bill also carried $1,074,000,000 for the final quarter of ECA's 1948 fiscal year.

It also includes: 900 million dol-

Social Security Expansion Bill Is Approved

Measure Would Take in 11 Million More, Hike Benefits

By The Associated Press

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved a bill to bring 11 million more Americans under social security and to boost payroll taxes to pay higher benefits.

The bill would guarantee old age pensions to hundreds of thousands of self-employed, domestic servants and food processors, and to four million State and local government workers not now protected.

The committee's surprise action will send to the House floor a bill which gives President Truman part of what he asked for in the way of broader social insurance coverage.

The main Truman proposal which is missing from the committee bill is coverage for five million farmers and 3,500,000 farm workers. Mr. Truman also had asked the inclusion of doctors, lawyers and some others, but the committee left them out.

All told, the President wanted 20 million persons added to the rolls, whereas the committee plan would add about 11 million.

As the bill stands, however,

Two Drugs Show Progress In Fight on Heart Ailments

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter
(Third of Six Articles)

"The attack is very short, and like a storm. It usually ends within an hour . . . To have any other malady is to be sick, to have this is to be dying."

Lucius Annaeus Seneca, Roman stoic philosopher, wrote these lines in the First Century to describe the symptoms of his own disease. They are the earliest known description of anginal pains of coronary insufficiency.

Coronary insufficiency, or failure of the heart's arteries to supply its own food needs, cuts a wide swath through the lives of older men and mows down others in their prime. Its chief forms, coronary thrombosis and coronary sclerosis, rank today as the leading cause of heart deaths from middle age onward.

The heart muscle and the brain need and use far more oxygen to function than other tissues in the human body. Deprived of that oxygen even briefly, these specialized tissues deteriorate quickly.

Coronary insufficiency is one of the chief heart threats at which today's research, medicine and surgery are directed. Only recently have two drugs, heparin and dicumarol, the blood lubricators, been proving effective against its ravages.

Coronary thrombosis strikes hardest and with the least warning. It comes with the formation of a blood clot in the coronary arteries, the twin network of arteries which encircle the heart like a crown and feed the organ with fresh blood as it surges up out of the aorta.

Coronary sclerosis comes more gradually with hardening of those arteries and loss of their elasticity. It pinches off the fuel lines which bring the heart muscle its oxygen. The results are the same, varying only in degree of clotting or narrowing. Unfed heart muscles die, and so do the stricken—about one out of five

Quirino Here To Win Nod for Pacific Pact

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines flew into Washington through a cloudless sky yesterday to try to win United States approval for a Pacific pact.

He was met by President Truman, nattily turned out in a white linen suit, a 21-gun salute, a military guard of honor—and no public show of enthusiasm for his idea at this time.

Today Quirino addresses the Senate and House in separate sessions.

In between other parties during Quirino's three-day stay here will be White House and State Department talks on the Pacific pact idea. President Truman told a press conference last week he was ready to talk with Quirino on any subject.

Officially, the State Department is "sympathetic" to the idea of a Pacific pact, similar to the new Atlantic Pact, as a union of Asiatic and Pacific nations designed to contain and control the threat of communism in the Far East.

In May, Secretary of State Acheson—one of those on hand yesterday to meet Quirino—declared that as India's Prime Minister Nehru had then just said, a Pacific defense pact could not take shape "until present internal conflicts in Asia were resolved."

The President rode out to the airport yesterday in an open car in which Quirino joined him for the return trip through rush-hour traffic-crowded streets. Quirino flew here in a Philippines Air Lines plane, granted special permission to fly across the United States, which landed precisely on schedule at 4:30 p. m.

After the customary hand shakes of the two heads of state, American Cabinet members and the Quirino party of 15 plus seven Philippine newspapermen, both executives made little speeches.

President Truman welcomed the Unification Fails To Cut Civilians,

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) reported yesterday that unification of the Army, Navy and Air Forces—voted nearly two years ago—has failed to reduce the number of civilian employes compared with men in uniform.

When unification first became effective in September, 1947, Byrd said there were 10 civilians employed for every 18 men in uniform. He said the ratio was identical at the start of the present fiscal year, July 1.

During the peak of the war there were 47 men in uniform for every 10 civilian employes, Byrd noted.

His report showed the national military establishment employed 884,728 civilians in June this year compared with 871,778 a year ago.

Stock Prices Hit 6-Month High Mark

Gains on Second Day Of Rally Range From Few Cents to $2-Plus

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The midsummer stock market rally continued through its second session today with prices advancing along a broad front to the highest level in around six months.

The rise added an estimated 700 million dollars to the total of all listed issues on the Stock Exchange, bringing the two-day gain to about $1,500,000,000.

Today's advance rolled forward without a hitch on the heels of Friday's rise.

Gains today were from a few cents to more than $2 a share. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks stood at $64.90, the best since February 3, when the average was $65.40. The highest this year was $66.20.

Some of the best increases and closing prices included U. S. Steel up 50 cents at $23.50, Santa Fe Railroad $1.75 at $88, Chrysler $1.62 at $53.25, Nickel Plate Railroad $2 at $70.50, Philco Radio $1.87 at $28.25, and Kennecott Copper $1 at $49.87.

British Securities Drop in Heavy Selling

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Heavy selling drove British government securities down as much as 25 shillings ($5) per 100 pound ($400) bond today.

Closing prices were well below even those of July 28, when government issues hit the lowest level since the panic days of the retreat from Dunkirk.

Brokers blamed the appearance on the market of another wad of government bonds issued to finish paying for the nationalized gas companies. Others said recent heavy withdrawals from postal savings accounts had caused uneasiness.

50 Communities Wrecked

100,000 Left Without Homes By Ecuadorian Earthquake

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 8 (AP).—A hundred thousand Ecuadorians were officially reported homeless today as a result of the earthquake that ripped 50 cities and villages Friday.

Estimates of the number killed rose as high as 6000, but an aide to President Galo Plaza said the death toll was more likely to be between 2000 and 4000.

The aide, Presidential Secretary Miguel Albornoz, stated the government had not been able to compile a death list.

The President announced that in Pelileo, a town of 3500, there were only 300 survivors.

President Plaza told a news conference the biggest emergency problem now is to provide housing for 100,000 persons. He pointed out that 75 per cent of the homes still standing in hard-hit Ambato must be torn down.

He said the government had asked the American republics to rush tents to the area and that the United States already was sending emergency shipments of canned foods.

The President said his estimate yesterday of 20 million dollars' property damage was "very modest" and might go much higher. A definite figure awaits an engineers' survey.

The President's secretary said

Vandenberg Not Satisfied With Bill's Revisions

Secretary Asserts He'll Resist Smaller Stop-Gap Program Showing 'Attitude'

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Dean Acheson yesterday tried to head off the heavy pressure to cut the proposed $1,450,000,000 arms aid program, but there was no immediate indication that he succeeded.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who has been publicly leading the drive to pare the program to a limited size and scope, made it clear that revisions in the redrafted arms bill are still far short of meeting his objections.

In a pointedly worded exchange with Acheson as the Senate opened its hearings on the measure, Vandenberg asked Acheson if he would "resist" a smaller stop-gap program demonstrating this Nation's "attitude" on arms aid.

This, said Vandenberg, could carry over until the North Atlantic Treaty organization comes into being.

"Yes, Senator Vandenberg," replied Acheson deliberately, "I would resist that. I believe that we must go farward on both of these fronts at the same time. Attitudes do not impress. The thing that impresses is the facts."

While Acheson's exchange with the top GOP congressional spokesman on foreign policy ended later on a somewhat warmer note, it indicated no lessening of the opposition to the program's size—which is also challenged by numerous Democrats.

In large part, it is expected that the fate of the full cash authorization on which the Administration insists will rest on justification given by the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff and others who will try to pin down the program to

New Heat Wave, Near 94 Degrees, To Hit D. C. Today

A warm air mass, which originated in the Southwest, is slated to scorch Washington with its hot breath for the next few days, shooting the temperature to a high of 94 today.

And it will get worse before it gets better, warned the weatherman yesterday, as he predicted the oncoming heat wave would reach a blistering 96 on Wednesday with "no break in sight."

This would equal the mark set 7 times last month and would be 12 points above the 84-degree normal maximum for August.

The coming event cast its shadow before yesterday with the thermometer climbing to a high of 91 at 4:50 p. m., ending a 7-day respite from the 90-degree heat. Low was 70 at 6:44 a. m.

The hot air mass moving northeast from the far Southwest broiled the Middle Plains States, the upper Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region.

It is now swinging southeast and headed in our general direction, the weatherman said.

The only solace that could be held out to Washingtonians was the indication that it probably would not get as hot as August 6, 1918, when the mercury soared to an August record of 106.

Truman Wins First Test on Wage Bill

Truman Administration forces won the first test as they opened a drive in the House yesterday to lift the national minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour.

The House voted 249 to 124 on a rollcall to bring up for debate a compromise worked out by Democratic leaders last week.

The debate promised to rage most of the week, perhaps all of it.

The first hot-tempered controversy was on a point of procedure. it was whether to consider the compromise bill, backed in strong statements by two Administration leaders, or the original Administration measure. The latter would broaden coverage of the wage-hour law much more than the former. It has been stoutly opposed by many Democrats, mostly from the South.

The compromise makes only comparatively minor changes in coverage of the law, which now applies to some 20 million workers in interstate commerce.

Representative Brown (R., Ohio) declared the compromise was worked out by three Southern Democrats, Representatives Sims (S. C.), Hale Boggs (La.) and Combs (Tex.). He said he wanted to congratulate them for "taking care of their States, perhaps at the expense of the rest of us."

Boggs denied he had anything to do with the compromise, and Brown withdrew his statement as far as he was concerned.

Brown said some predominantly Southern industries were excluded by the compromise from coverage of the wage-hour law, and even from child labor legislation.

Chairman Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the Labor Committee had just defended the measure. Leading off the Administration drive with a formal statement, he called it "an honest endeavor to write a minimum wage law which can be supported by all members of the House."

The compromise, besides raising the minimum wage, would extend wage coverage to 100,000 to 115,000 seamen, and protection of the 40-hour week to 600,000 to 650,000 maintenance employes of bus, truck and air lines. About 120,000 employes of small sawmills, who now are covered by the act, would be dropped.

Bill for 65-Cent Rise

Many Southern Democrats and Republicans tentatively lined up back of another substitute to be offered by Representative Lucas (D., Tex.), a Labor Committee member.

His bill would raise the minimum wage to 65 cents an hour, then tie it to the cost of living. It would be adjusted up or down every year. But it could not fall below 50 cents.

This bill also would exempt workers not indispensable to production for interstate commerce. Committee experts estimated this would exclude more than one million workers now covered.

Scores of other amendments were ready to be offered, including two major changes in the wage section by Representatives Sims and Combs.

Hunt's Aid to Track Reviewed

Paul Grindle, New England manufacturer, told Senators yesterday about the strange case of the leaking roof at the Foxboro trotting track clubhouse—and what caused it.

The track, located 19 miles from Boston, was built during 1946-47 with what Grindle described as $15,000 worth of help from James V. Hunt of Washington, key figure in the Senate's "five per center" investigation.

Grindle, one of the opening witnesses before the Senate Investigating Committee, said Hunt told him this story of how he helped get the track built:

Paul Bowser of Boston, president of the track, went to Hunt for help in getting the then-required Government okay. Hunt went to Frank Creedon, then housing expediter now with the Hanford, Wash., atomic plant, and Creedon told him what to do about "getting around regulations."

The "loophole" was that a building could be moved onto a site and housing officials would approve alterations for it. So at Foxboro some small buildings were moved to the track site and remodeled into a single building for a clubhouse.

But Boston housing officials decided the track had gone too far outside regulations. So they ordered the buildings separated by cutting three two-foot slots across the structure.

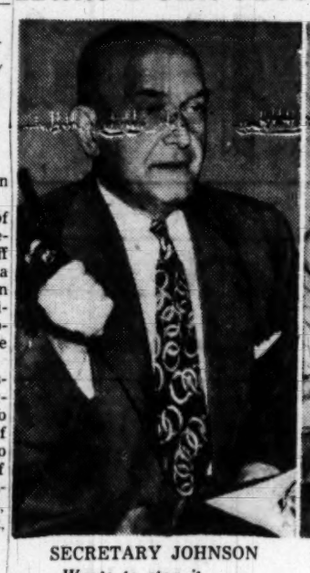
This let in the sky and the rain and Bowser protested.

Bowser notified Hunt and Hunt again went to Creedon. Creedon phoned the Boston office and demanded to know if they were trying to make him "the laughing stock of the country."

Boston officials told Creedon the slots already had been cut and it would cost too much to plug them.

Grindle, a Framingham, Mass., manufacturer, never did get around to saying whether the slots had been covered over. He did say Hunt told him he collected a $15,000 fee from the track.

Hunt Dealt Mostly With 'Hill,' Probers Told



SECRETARY JOHNSON
Wants to stop it . . .

GEN. E. M. BRANNON
Early witness . . .

PAUL D. GRINDLE

46. He told that newspaper about his dealings with Hunt in his present role as president and treasurer of the C. W. Laing Woodworking Corporation, and this led up to the present Senate investigation.

Hunt has announced that he plans to sue the Herald Tribune.

Grindle, in his testimony yesterday, quoted Hunt as saying that he was "very close" to Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, and was one of a group of four men at the White House the night that Johnson was called in and told that he was to be given his present post.

Feldman, Waitt Mentioned

The witness also represented Hunt as saying he was on intimate terms with Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, the Quartermaster General, and Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, chief of the Chemical Corps. Both of these officers have been relieved from duty temporarily for failing to show judgment "expected of persons in their positions."

Hunt, according to Grindle's story, devoted most of his sales talk on influence to his relations with General Vaughan, the White House military aide.

He said that Hunt told him that Vaughan was in the habit of giving him brandy and cigars—the brandy earmarked for Mrs. Hunt. He said the management counselor told him that a certain distiller sent brandy to the White House once a month.

He said Hunt showed him a picture taken at the White House, showing Mrs. Hunt and Gen. Vaughan together. He quoted Hunt as saying that this was taken at one of two White House parties given "in his honor."

Dedicated Song to Margaret

He quoted Hunt as saying, also, that he had written a song and dedicated it to Miss Margaret Truman.

[Robert Q. White, Hunt's attorney, later told the United Press that Hunt wrote one song, called "My Missouri," which was dedicated to the President. He said it had been played by the United States Marine Band at several White House parties.

[White said Hunt had written lyrics for "quite a few songs," but that he did not know which, if any, had been dedicated to the President's daughter.]

Grindle said that he once asked Hunt if he would have any chance of getting a contract for the woodworking in the reconstruction of the White House.

He said Hunt answered by pointing out that another of his clients was Dorothy Draper, an interior decorator, and that General Vaughan had told him that there was no reason why Miss Draper should not get the interior decorating contract for the White House.

He quoted Hunt as saying that, therefore, there was no reason why he Grindle should not get the woodworking contract.

Tells of Hotel Lido Deal

To judge from Grindle's testimony, Hunt's career as a management counselor was marked by a succession of triumphant big deals.

The New England manufacturer, quoting Hunt, told of what happened in the case of the Lido Hotel, which was sold to the Government during the war for $1,300,000 and then bought back by the Seiden Hotel Group for $534,000.

He said that Hunt told him of arranging the deal through the War Assets Administration, and of getting a fee of $102,500—his largest.

Grindle said Hunt also told him of a 200-million-dollar deal in connection with plane parts. The idea was, he quoted Hunt as saying, to have the equipment declared surplus and then sold for $18 a ton to a syndicate he represented. The syndicate would then sell at a profit.

Johnson Pledges Fight

He quoted Hunt as saying that the deal "would make the taxpayers' blood boil if they knew about it."

The first witness yesterday when the hearing opened in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building was Secretary of Defense Johnson. He told the subcommittee:

"We are in entire sympathy with your determination to get rid of these unscrupulous men who prey upon both business and Government by selling—rather I would call it peddling—influence."

Johnson said he had been hearing for some time that "the number of so-called 5 percenters has been on the increase in Washington and other cities where the dollar volume of Government procurement business runs high. He added:

"I was amazed at their audacity and at the extent of their operations. When I became Secretary of Defense, I vowed that I would break their power, and began to measure my sights on them almost as soon as I took office."

Grindle, a heavy-set young man with black hair and horn-rim glasses, told the Senators at the outset of how he came to meet Hunt. He explained that his woodworking plant in Framingham does not have a level production but experiences "ups and downs." In February and March, he said, business was slow, and he told a lot of people that he would like to get some Government contracts.

A man named Cline or Kline, he said, telephoned from Boston and said he knew a man who had good contacts in Washington and knew how to get Government contracts.

Later, he said, this man suggested that he call J. Leonard Michelson in Boston. It turned out that Michelson belonged to a firm made up of himself, A. J. Condon and Arthur Small. These three visited Framingham and looked over Grindle's plant.

Grindle said that Condon, leader of the trio, used his telephone and called Hunt in Washington and made some inquiries about a Government contract for foot-lockers.

$2000 Fees As Starter

Two days later, Grindle flew here and called on Hunt in his offices in the Barr Building. That was April 22. In the course of this first interview—others were to follow—Hunt, according to Grindle, said that General Vaughan was one of his closest friends and that he could go—and did go—to the White House at any time.

Grindle said that when it came to talking terms, Hunt said he would have to pay Condon, Michelson and Small a "finder's fee" of $1000. This, it was explained, was to compensate the trio for "finding" Hunt for Grindle.

Grindle said that Hunt's own terms were $1000 down, $500 a month as a retainer, and then 5 per rent of any contract that was obtained from the Government.

Grindle said he paid Hunt the $1000 down payment. He never explained—and no member of the committee asked—why he broke up with Hunt after that and decided to tell his story.

The hearing will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building.

SPECIAL NOTICES

"NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN in accordance with Sections 2 and 3 of the Association's By-Laws that a Special Meeting of the Members of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington will be held at 2 o'clock p. m. on Monday, August 15, 1949, at the home office of the Association, 610 Thirteenth Street, N.W., in the City of Washington, D. C., for the purpose of considering and voting on the following: (a) a proposal to amend the Charter of the Association in its entirety so as to read in the form of Charter N as prescribed by the Home Loan Bank Board; (b) amendment of By-Laws of the Association so as to conform with Charter N; and (c) any other appropriate matters to effectively conform the Association's operations to the provisions of Charter N and Rules and Regulations for the Federal Savings and Loan System in effect upon the date of the meeting. Dated at Washington, D. C., August 1, 1949. First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington, by C. E. BALLOU, Secretary."

Social Security Expansion Bill Approved

about 46 million persons would be carrying social security cards instead of the 35 million now holding them.

If finally approved by Congress, the legislation would boost old-age insurance benefits from 50 per cent to as much as 150 per cent in some categories. The average increase would be about 80 per cent. Old-age minimum benefits would be raised from $10 to $25 a month and maximum benefits for one family from $85 to $150 a month.

On taxes, the committee proposed that the first $3600 of a person's income be taxed, whereas present Social Security law taxes only the first $3000 of income. Employers match the old-age insurance taxes paid by their employes.

The Social Security tax, now 1 per cent against employes' pay and employers' payrolls, is due to jump automatically January 1, 1950 to 1½ per cent against each and to 2 per cent on each on January 1, 1952. The committee tentatively has decided that the levy should increase further to 2½ per cent in 1960 and to 3 per cent in 1965.

Extension of coverage under the new legislation would be as follows:

1. Certain self-employed persons other than farmers—about 4,500,000. (These would be covered when net earnings from self-employment are $400 or more per year.)

2. Employes of nonprofit institutions other than ministers—600,000. (Employer is not compulsorily taxed but may voluntarily elect to participate. If employer does not participate, employe receives only one half credits under the program.)

3. Domestic servants not in a farm home—750,000. (They would be covered when regularly employed if cash earnings exceed $25 for a three-month period.)

4. State and local government employes—four million. (Covered if State enters into a compact with the Federal Security Agency. In addition employes already under a retirement system are covered only if a two-thirds majority approve.)

5. Federal employes not under a retirement program—100,000.

6. Miscellaneous coverage groups—500,000. (Including agricultural processing workers off the farm, non-profit agricultural and horticultural organizations, voluntary employes' benefit associations, farm loan and farm credit institutions, employment of United States citizens outside the United States by American employers, and inclusion of tips as wages.)

Committee Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) said about 500,000 more workers would be included by a redefinition of "employe" which in effect repeals the "Gearhart" resolution passed by the last Congress and excluded some persons whose status of employe was in doubt, such as salesmen.

The new bill retains that the retirement age at 65 years, rejecting Administration proposals that the age be lowered to 60 for women.

It adds a new classification for insurance benefits—the permanently and totally disabled persons. They would receive benefits in the same amount as if they had reached retirement age.

The amount a retired person could earn in covered employment without loss of benefits would be increased from the present $15 to $50 per month. After 75, benefits would be paid regardless of employment.

Council of Europe Asks Three to Join

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 8 (NYHT).—The Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe met today for the first time and invited Turkey, Greece and Iceland to become members of the council.

Turkish Foreign Minister Necmeddin Sadak and Greek Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris will take part in Tuesday's meetings of the committee but Iceland is not expected to be represented at this session because its Parliament is not in session and cannot act now on the invitation.

The inclusion of Greece and Turkey brings to 12 the membership of the council, whose declared aim is to promote "greater unity" between member nations.

The 12 Ministers will turn their attention Tuesday to drawing up an agenda for the consultative assembly, which is to meet for the first time Wednesday. There will be 101 delegates, their number having been increased by the appointment today of eight seats to Turkey and six to Greece. Iceland will have three seats when it joins the council.

Should the assembly decide it wants to discuss immediate steps to create a federation of Europe, as some members have proposed, the council might refuse to permit this on grounds such a discussion would go beyond the assembly's terms of reference under the statute. But for many delegates federation is the council's major aim and reason for existence.

Admission of Germany to the council was not discussed in today's meeting and probably will not be considered unless the question is raised by the assembly.

All believers in European union agree Germany must be included—or as much of Germany as possible.

The invitation may be delayed, however, until after a West German government has been formed.

Austria's admission has not been discussed either, and it is understood the Austrians are not interested in being invited until the Austrian peace treaty has been agreed upon by the Big Four.

U. N. Hiring Subversives, Senator Says

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) asserted yesterday that persons in authority on the United Nations staff have gone there "directly from fields of subversive activity" in this country. He cited what he called two typical examples.

The U. N. immediately retorted that one of them, a Polish national, holds an elected position and is not responsible to the international agency in any way.

The other, radio writer Norman Corwin, replied in New York that "I believe I am a vastly better patriot" than McCarran.

The Senator told his colleagues that Corwin, a member of the U. N.'s radio division since last March, is or has been a member of a long list of Communist-front organizations which the Attorney General has cited as subversive.

Denies Being Communist

Corwin denied, as he has in the past, that he is a Communist. And he added:

"I have worked at the job of helping to broaden an appreciation of American institutions, our democracy and our form of government. My sentiments have never been secret from anyone and are on record in print and on transcription for everyone to see."

The othe rperson McCarran mentioned was Ludwig Rajchman, whom he identified as director of the U. N. International Children's Emergency Fund.

The U. N., at Lake Success, said Maurice Pate is the UNICEF's executive director and that Rajchman is not employed by U. N. at all.

He is the Polish representative on the UNICEF's executive board, the U. N. said, and was unanimously elected its chairman by the 26 nations represented.

Disloyal Hired by U. N.

McCarran declared that during the war the United States State Department made "attempts to have the Polish government, with which Rajchman was affiliated in this country, recall him because of his involvements in intrigues contrary to the interests of the United States."

He said that if the case of Corwin were an isolated one, it would not be disturbing. But he continued:

"It is unfortunately characteristic of a number of people who have been selected to serve in the secretariat of the United Nations. Included in this group are persons who have been disqualified from holding public office in the United States as a result of the loyalty investigations."

McCarran is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee which recently made public testimony of an unidentified mystery witness to the effect that Communist agents have terrorized the U. N. staff.

Spy Witness Is Withdrawn

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—A woman Communist from St. Louis was withdrawn as a defense witness today after the judge blocked questions put to her at the conspiracy trial of 11 top Red leaders.

The woman, Helen Musil, was asked by Defense Attorney Harry Sacher about Communist books she recommended to a party training class in 1945.

The Government objected without giving reason. Federal Judge Harold R. Medina halted the questioning, also without stating a reason.

With the jury dismissed for the moment, Sacher told the court he had no choice but to withdraw the witness since his questions were blocked.

Later, Judge Medina warned the defense that it was not properly laying the foundation for its questions.

"It appears futile for me to try to guide you," Judge Medina said. "This is the last time I'll say that. From now on I'll just sustain the objections.

Miss Musil, 34, took the stand shortly after she was reluctantly identified by a prior witness as the "Helen" mentioned in a Communist bulletin.

She is a sausage maker and a State organizational director for the Communists in Missouri, she said.

State Dept. Aide To Review China Policy in Speech

Francis Russell, director of the State Department's office of public affairs, will review the department's China policy in a speech at Laramie, Wyo., Friday night.

The speech is due to contain no new line on China, but to be a review of the recently released white paper, the Staote Department said.

The speech, at the University of Wyoming's Institute of International Affairs, may be nationally broadcast if arrangements are completed, it was said.

Kefauver Says Congress Lags Behind People on World Union

By The Associated Press

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who wants seven democratic nations to join in a federal union something like our own Union of 48 States, said yesterday that "Congress is far behind the people on this subject."

On behalf of a group of 20 Senators, Kefauver has introduced a resolution asking the President to invite Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, and Luxembourg to a "federal convention" to explore how far they can apply to themselves "the principles of free federal union" within the framework of the United States.

The sponsors see this convention as comparable to the Constitutional Convention held by the 13 original American States in 1787.

Kefauver, in an interview, said during the two weeks since the resolution was introduced, "interest has been increasing tremendously all over the country."

When asked whether he thinks the seven Atlantic nations can go as far in forming a federal union as the Thirteen American States did, Kefauver replied:

"Not quite that far, to begin with. But I think they might set up a common foreign policy, common defense, common currency, postal system, and trade relations."

The Kefauver resolution has been introduced also in the House by Representative Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), and others.

Lie Sides With East Europe In U. N. Report

By Mac R. Johnson

Lake Success, Aug. 8 (NYHT). Taking firm positions on controversial issues, Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the United Nations, recommended blanket admission of 14 countries seeking U. N. membership, and a direct U. N. trusteeship for the former Italian colonies in North Africa, in his fourth annual report released tonight.

In making these and other recommendations for "strengthening the United Nations," Lie braved the ire of Western democracies, because his views on the membership and colonies questions closely coincided with those of the Eastern European nations.

Year of Progress

His report covered the year ended June 30, 1949, which on the whole, he said, had been "a year of progress toward a more peaceful world . . . the fear of war has decreased since my last report . . . the breaking of the Berlin deadlock has been a main factor in achieving this result."

The United Nations made a major contribution toward a more peaceful world by ending or preventing wars involving 500 million people in Palestine, Kashmir and Indonesia by employing only moral force and its power of persuasion, Lie reported.

To reduce the danger of war and to strengthen the U. N., Lie recommended:

1. The practice of consultation between the great powers must continue.

2. A U. N. guard must be created to strengthen the work of mediation and conciliation.

Trusteeship for Colonies

3. A direct United Nations trusteeship should be established for the former Italian colonies with a single administrator responsible solely to the Trusteeship Council.

4. The Middle East, with emphasis on Israel and the Arab states, should be given high priority in the proposed U. N. program of technical assistance for underdeveloped countries.

5. The economic machinery of the U. N. must come to grips with pressing world economic problems such as the persistent disequilibrium in international trade and payments and the slackening of economic activity which threatens unemployment in many countries.

6. Albania, Mongolian Peoples' Republic, Jordan, Portugal, Ireland, Hungary, Italy, Austria, Romania, Bulgaria, Finland, Ceylon, Korea and Nepal should be admitted to U. N. membership.

Pact Defense Organization To Function in About 90 Days

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The defense organization which is to unify the fighting forces of western Europe under the Atlantic Pact may be in operation within three months, the United States Chiefs of Staff said today as they left by air for Washington.

All member countries of the pact, whose fighting chiefs the Americans saw during their 10-day tour of Europe, are in agreement on the general lines of the organization, they said.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff; Adm. Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, are due in Washington about 7 a. m. Tuesday and are expected to report to President Truman and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson on their tour.

Three hours after the defense chiefs left, a crowd of about 100 Communists demonstrated against them and the Atlantic Pact in front of the American-occupied Bristol Hotel.

General Bradley said before the defense chiefs took off that he considered the conferences they held here, at Frankfurt, Germany, and in London and Paris successful "principally because they showed that all the people think along the same lines on military organization," Bradley added. "There seem to be no material differences on setting up the general military organization."

Asked how long he thought it would take to set up a military organization and make the Atlantic Pact a going concern, Bradley said:

"That is really a problem of strategy. It may depend upon the difficulties run into over details, and all in all that is a Government problem. I might say about three month, but that is only my estimate. There should not be too much trouble. I hope it will not be too long."

Bradley repeated that no decisions had been reached during the tour.

Confidence Men Get Deposit on Big RAF Base

London, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Scotland Yard disclosed today that a band of confidence men almost succeeded in selling a large Royal Air Force base, complete with buildings, runways and equipment to a South African for one million dollars.

"It was something like trying to sell the Brooklyn Bridge," a Yard officer told American newsmen. "It was the biggest attempted confidence trick in British history."

The South African, who was not identified, paid a "deposit" for the field, a wartime United States bomber base.

He flew 5000 miles to see the field, not being used at present, was shown around by the confidence men, appeared to like the field very much and paid an undisclosed deposit.

French Seamstresses End 10-Day Walkout

Paris, Aug. 8 (AP).—Seamstresses went back to work today for Schiaparelli, Jacques Fath and Pierre Balmain, ending a 10-day strike against leading Paris fashion houses.

Talks will be resumed this week on wage increases asked by the seamstresses' union.

Chinese Buck Red Rule in Honan Region

Nanking, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Communist New China news agency reported today that more than 170 village societies had revolted against Communist rule in Honan Province since last spring.

Honan Province is in north-central China between Hankow and Peiping. It adjoins Anhwei Province where the Communists have claimed to put down other revolts against the Red regime.

The agency said the rebels were trying to destroy the "revolutionary order" and the construction of a new China. It said they were guilty of arson, rape, murder, robbery and spreading rumors.

The agency did not say whether the 170 village societies were under a central command, but said they were dominated by Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) secret agents it called "political bandits" and "despotic landlords."

Reds Find New Route As Gov't. Troops Quit

Hongkong, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Desertion of government troops at Shaoyang opened up a new route southward for the Communists today and it was believed the Red armies were trying to outflank the Nationalist defenses before Canton.

Large groups of Communist troops were reported converging on Shaoyang, the important South-Central China base deep within Nationalist lines which defected to the Communists last week. The maneuver would carry them west of the main Nationalist defenses.

The Communist troops were believed headed for Kweilin, capital of Kwangsi Province 130 miles to the south, along the route used by the Japanese army in its final drive of the war. Such a plan would enable the Reds to bypass the Nationalist defenses and sweep toward Canton from the west.

Elephant Coughs Up

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Rosie, a zoo elephant, grabbed a woman's handbag today and swallowed it.

"Please, Rosie," said her keeper. "Give it back."

But all Rosie would cough up was a cigarette lighter.

Reds Seek Departure of U. N. From Israel-Arab Controversy

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 8 (U.P.). Russia asked the United Nations today to get out of Palestine and let Israel and her Arab neighbors work out their own settlement of a permanent peace in the Holy Land.

Soviet Delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin proposed that the Security Council recall the small staff of observers still in the Holy Land and liquidate the Palestine Conciliation Commission. The commission currently is striving at Lausanne, Switzerland, to bring about a permanent peace treaty between Israel and the Arab states.

Tsarapkin's proposal was opposed immediately by Acting Palestine Mediator Ralph J. Bunche, who warned that the recall of the U. N. observers "would have very serious effects on the armistice agreements" between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

Israel, Egypt and Syria aligned themselves with Bunche's position. Egypt is a member of the Security Council and Israel and Syria were invited to join its discussion of Bunche's final Palestine mediation report as observers.

The council adjourned its Palestine discussion until Thursday.

Laughing Religion Organized in Japan

Maebashi, Japan, Aug. 8 (AP).—A new sect known as the Laughing Religion has been founded here.

lars for army occupation in Germany, Austria, Japan and the Ryukyu Islands; 150 million dollars for Economic Cooperation loans to Europe; 45 million dollars for Greece and Turkey, and $344,000 for a congressional watchdog committee to check on foreign spending.

Besides the antinationalization amendment, the Senate earlier had defeated proposals to earmark 50 million dollars for aid to Spain, and to require ECA and the Army to use $1,350,000,000 for the purchase of American farm surpluses.

Bail in Deportation Case Set at $25,000

New York, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Bail of $25,000 today was set for George Pirensky, secretary of the American-Slav conference who has been held on Ellis Island since July 7, awaiting deportation proceedings.

The American Committee for the Foreign-Born announced later that it would seek an order to "show cause in Federal Court immediately to win Pirensky's release on reasonable bai." The committee said the bail set was too high.

Canada Defense Talks Slated by Johnson

By the United Press

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson will fly to Ottawa Thursday to confer with Canadian defense officials on "matters of mutual interest."

Johnson will talk with Prime Minister St. Laurent, Defense Minister Brooke Claxton and other members of the Canadian Cabinet Defense Committee. Johnson's predecessor, the late James Forrestal, visited Ottawa a year ago.

Acheson Seeks to Block Arms Trim

western Europe's needs and defense plans.

Senator Vandenberg and several other members of the joint Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committee holding the hearings, challenged the need to set up a program which would extend into the Atlantic Pact timetable.

Vandenberg expressed fear that inasmuch as deliveries under the bill would extend over two years, that it, and not the treaty which he strongly supported, would set the pattern for "integrated defense."

Acheson countered that the "facts," and not the bill, set this pattern.

The strategic concept, he said, already exists—created by the geography, nations, etc., involved—and arms contemplated by the bill are basic to any defense plan.

A smaller program, said Acheson, "defeats itself," for a 'half-equipped division is of little value, and some time is required to contract for such items as radar and similar intricate equipment.

Vandenberg, who prefaced his remarks by saying it would be a "great calamity if an aid program of some kind is not passed at this session, told Acheson:

"I am quite willing to be shown that your point of view is correct. I hope you are equally willing to be shown that it is not necessary to go so far at this time on that scale."

When Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.) suggested a six-month program until the next congressional session when the Atlantic treaty defense mechanism will be organized, Acheson said, "You don't get very far with Congress in January or February. You would delay the whole program."

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), second ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, questioned the program's relations to the treaty and suggested it was nothing better than "a well-informed guess" that the two will "mesh in."

George also questioned the program's effect on European recovery.

Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), who has joined with Vandenberg in calling for a limited arms program, was present at the hearing as an observer. He declined an invitation to participate in the questioning.

Asked if he would consider adding new aid for China to the bill, Acheson said:

"At the present time, we are not in a position where we feel justified in asking Congress for funds which we could neither program nor justify for China or the Far East.

He said, however, as forecast by The Washington Post, that the Administration might be agreeable to increasing the program to include aid which might be used in China at the President's discretion.

Questioned on China policy by Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), and also by Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), who have been joined by 11 GOP Senators in introducing an amendment to earmark 175 million dollars of the program money for China, Acheson said:

'If the Congress wanted to give the Chief Executive some funds which he might use at his discretion, that might be wise to do . . . A comparatively small sum, which might be used in the For East generally . . ."

Secretary Acheson siad he hopes to meet soon with Senate and House committees to discuss plans for a Far Eastern policy, now being reviewed by a committee headed by Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup.

In the House yesterday companion bills for 200 million dollars for Chinese military aid were introduced by Representatives John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.) and Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.).

Lodge, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which yesterday completed its open hearings on the arms bill, said he will propose an amendment to include new aid for China in that program.

In its present form, the arms bill would provide $1,160,990,000 to help rearm western European members of the Atlantic Pact; give Greece and Turkey up to $211,370,000 and earmark $27,640,000 for military assistance to Iran, Turkey and the Philippines.

Weapons which originally cost this Nation 450 million dollars would be charged to the program at only a rehabilitation cost of 75 million dollars.

Rather than being in conflict with the treaty, Secretary Acheson said, the arms plan will "enable the builders to build upon something real."

Pressure of the large armies "behind the Iron Curtain," he said, "is the club in the closet of every Communist government in Europe, and there is little effort made to keep the weapon concealed."

Acheson described western Europe as an organism with a "soft shell" which invites attack, while it must develop "a hard shell of adequate defense forces to discourage . . . attack."

In answer to a question by Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), who presided at the hearings, Acheson said the principal work of the defense council under the Atlantic Treaty "will almost begin where this bill leaves off."

The council, he said, will be established this fall.

Several Senators expressed belief there are insufficient reins in the bill to prevent the Administration from declaring additional weapons "surplus" beyond the proposed arms costing 450 million dollars.

Asked by Senator Johnson if he objected to limiting he surplus in the bill to about 500 million dollars, Acheson said he did not personally object to this in principle. The military leaders could better answer this, he said.

"How is it,' demanded Senator Knowland, that when the most recent China aid was voted "we apparently had no surplus available at this bargain counter rate, and yet the committee is informed that today 450 million dollars is available?"

Acheson agreed this would have to be "cleared up."

In the House hearings, meanwhile, the arms bill was challenged on several fronts.

Retiring Brig. Gen. Bonner Fellers, 3535 Springland lane nw., a member of General MacArthur's staff in World War II, urged building "the greatest air force in the world" instead of sending large-scale military aid to Europe.

Arms should only be supplied to Europe to protect internal security, he said, for there is no way to stop Russia on the ground.

Arnold Johnson, national legislative director of the Communist Party, condemned the entire plan as "an aggressive war measure."

Richard Morford, executive director of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, declared that "military might will never be a successful arbiter in this country's relations with the Soviet Union.

Harold Buchman, Maryland State Director of the Progressive Party, protested the "air of haste" in acting on the bill, which "warrants suspicion from anyone."

Fred C. McKee, national chairman of the Committee on National Affairs, supported the program as "essential for our defense," but deplored the absence of further aid for China.

Bridge Expert Ely Culbertson, chairman of the Citizens Committee for United Nations Reform, termed the arms program inadequate in itself, because it should be supplemented by an international force to keep world peace while it still exists.

Dr. W .E. B. Du Bois, vice chairman of the Council on African Affairs, said "ideas are seldoom changed by force." Russia and communism "are not your enemies," he said. The enemy is "utterly selfish corporate wealth," and "ignorance, disease and waste."

Maritime Board Member Indorses Charge Of 'Irregularities' in Ship Subsidy Awards

By the United Press

A Maritime Commission member st night indorsed a charge of rregularities" in commission hipbuilding subsidy awards, inuding money for a 70-millionollar "superliner."

The row inside the commission xploded before a House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee vestigating an accusation against the commission by the General General Accounting Office on 150 million dollars in shipbuilding.

Commissioner Raymond S. McKeough told the subcommittee he indorsed the Comproller General's finding of improper procedures in fixing the subsidies for the ships and said he had fought in the commission to prevent them.

"There can be no excuse for reckless abandonment of an orderly, systematic approach to the required determination or for neglect of an objective, unprejudiced and uninfluenced professional search for the correct answer," McKeough said.

Witnesses Are Sworn

The subcommittee under Representative Porter Hardy, jr. (D., Va.) held a special night meeting to dig into the details of the subsidy awards. Hardy put witnesses under oath in what he said was an effort to get a "satisfactory" answer to how the agency figures out the size of its subsidies.

Two commissioners, Grenville Mellen and Joseph J. Carson, jr., had defended the awards of some 80 million dollars on the projects, which included the United States Lines' superliner now building and five other ships to be constructed by American Export Lines and American President Lines.

McKeough revealed that he had agreed to all but the superliner award, which called for the Government to put up $42,285,784 and the United States Lines $28,087,216 of the cost.

"Again and again, I made the record of our meetings show where there were deviations from established procedures and I sought to keep such deviations to a minimum," McKeough, a former member of Congress, said.

He said the added costs in figuring Government subsidies—required by law to stay within 33 1-3 to 50 per cent—were based on comparisons with costs of shipbuilding in other countries. The subsidie sare designed to keep American shipping competitive wit hother nations which have cheaper building costs.

The "deviations," he said, were in calculating foreign profits and standards of construction, in amounts allowed for use of the ship in defense and in changes in fluctuating labor costs. In each case, he claimed the result raised the Government's costs. The General Accounting Office criticized the same items.

McKeough said contract arrangements for the three projected American President passenger-cargo vessels and the American export's two passenger ships had not been written finally and suggested something might be found recoverable on the items.

The General Accounting Office said altogether the subsidies were "at least" $25 million too high.

Medal of Honor Winner Defeated in Primary

Henderson, Ky., Aug. 8 (AP).—A Congressional Medal of Honor winner failed by a wide margin to win his first venture into politics in the Democratic primary held here Saturday.

Luther Skaggs, jr., holder of the highest military award bestowed by the United States, was far out of the running in his race for the Henderson County court clerk nomination, with 37 of the county's 48 precincts counted today. Skaggs carried only one precinct, by 10 votes.

Ford Workers Vote on Strike

Detroit, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Union-chartered buses shuttled Ford Motor Company workers to voting booths today in the largest supervised strike vote in American history.

Long lines of Walter Reuther's CIO United Auto Workers waited turns to mark their ballots for work or strike to enforce fourth-round contract demands.

The auto workers, voting under Michigan's "Little Taft-Hartley Law," were expected to give a thundering "yes" to a second strike against Ford in three months.

About 87,000 workers were eligible to vote in the three-day election. The bulk of them were from Ford's huge River Rouge plant.

UAW members at other Ford plants around the Nation already have approved a strike by a union-reported 7 to 1 majority. The 106,000 employes are asking $100-a-month pensions, a health security program and a fourth-round wage increase.

Voting was orderly. There was no disturbance.

Vote results were expected to be announced late Thursday.

Stevedoring Seizure Due In Hawaii Today

Honolulu, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Territorial Government will move Tuesday to take over Hawaii's strikebound stevedoring industry, the officials who will direct the operation said tonight.

Ben F. Rush, who will head the territory's stevedoring agency, said recruiting of dock workers will start Tuesday and that "it's safe to say we will probably seize the docks Tuesday night."

His announcement came as the striking CIO Longshore Union prepared to test the constitutionality of the dock seizure law.

Rush met this afternoon with Attorney General Walter Ackerman and officials of the seven struck stevedoring firms. He said no decision was reached on how the seizure will be made.

Rush said special loyalty oath cards are being printed for the government-hired dock workers.

Jack Hall, regional director of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, said the union is determined to picket any territorial stevedoring operation.

Obscene Gestures Charge Gets Fine For Ex-Policeman

Lloyd W. Chisholm, 28, a former park policeman here, was fined $75 yesterday in Municipal Court on three charges of making obscene gestures.

The alleged acts were committed last March before women in the Department of Agriculture Building. Chisholm said he would appeal and was released under $300 bond.

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell said: "This is the maximum penalty allowed by law, but if the law permitted it, I'd have no compunction at all about sending you to jail."

Klan Dragon Bans Masks and Hoods

Atlanta, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Dr. Samuel Green, Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, today ordered Klan members to stop wearing masks and white hoods "anywhere in the United States."

Green warned that violation of his edict would bring swift banishment to any member of the secret order.

Meanwhile, in the little southwest Georgia farming town of Iron City, where Mayor C. L. Drake and a party of friends scattered a 16-car caravan of Klansmen with gunfire early yesterday, a Klan spokesman boasted that the Klan will ride again on Saturday night.

Klavern Is Defiant

James Bearch, identified as Grand Cyclops of the Iron City Klavern, issued a blistering statement calling Mayor Drake "a liar" for saying the Klan was responsible for violence in the area. He bluntly challenged the mayor by announcing the Klan will parade through Iron City again Saturday night.

Green's order stripping Klansmen of their masks and hoods—a move he had fought stubbornly when it was urged in the State Legislature—was prompted by the current wave of nightriding violence in the South. Green has maintained these masked and hooded mobs are not Klansmen.

"Certain irresponsible persons," Green said with his order today, "have used what appeared to be Klan robes and masks to commit certain unlawful acts."

Second Unmasking

It was the second time in 10 years the Klan had received such an unmasking order. Following a wave of violence in the 1930s, James Colescott, then Imperial Wizard, instructed members to cease wearing masks or visors.

Green disclaims any part of the southwest Georgia Klan group mixed up in the Iron City feud. The Grand Dragon has charged in the past that the other group is "an offshoot of hotheads."

Mayor Drake was unavailable for comment on the Klan challenge, but he was expected to take once more what he has termed precautionary measures.

When a band he identified as Klansmen slipped up on his home recently through a cow pasture, Drake blazed away with a shotgun, and scattered the intruders.

21 Arrested in Raid

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—Twenty-one persons were arrested when State and local authorities raided the Esquire Club near here yesterday. They were charged with gambling and disorderly conduct.

15-Foot Fall Kills Man at Gun Factory

James T. Schlosser, 59-year-old civilian Navy employe, fell 15 feet to his death yesterday at the Navy Gun Factory.

Schlosser

Police believe he may have fainted before tumbling from the second floor balcony where he had been at work issuing steamfitter supplies.

He landed head first on the concrete floor. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Providence Hospital. Acting Coroner Christopher J. Murphy issued a certificate of accidental death.

Schlosser, a veteran of World War 1, was due to retire in six months. He had worked at the Navy Gun Factory 9 years.

Survivors include his wife, Maude, and a daughter.

Jailed as Victimizer

Leon M. Marshall, 29, was sentenced yesterday to serve two years in jail for mulcting two cab drivers of $9.50. Municipal Court charges said Marshall posed as a bill collector, and got the money on the pretext he needed change, and would pay out of collections. Marshall lives at 1927 17th st. nw., according to court records.

For Rival's Death

Dr. Rutledge Sentenced To 70 Years

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Aug. 8 (AP).—Dr. Robert C. Rutledge, jr., smiled wanly and his wife cried as the doctor was sentenced to 70 years "at hard labor" today for the slaying of his wife's admirer.

District Judge J. E. Heiserman pronounced sentence on the handsome 28-year-old St. Louis pediatrician, convicted May 28 of the fatal stabbing of Byron C. Hattman during a Cedar Rapids hotel room fight.

Dr. Rutledge Mrs. Rutledge

The defense contended throughout the trial that Hattman pursued and seduced Rutledge's wife, Sydney, 22.

The doctor was convicted of second-degree murder, the penalty for which is 10 years to life imprisonment. The court said that "at worst" Rutledge would serve approximately 30 years, counting time off for good behavior.

Forty-five minutes after the sentencing, he was en route to the State penitentiary at Fort Madison.

Guardsmen Help Battle Forest Blaze

Helena, Mont., Aug. 8 (AP).—Weary, grimy men, worked doggedly today to halt the spreading menace of forest fires throughout the Northwest.

Many blazes in the tinder-dry wilderness, baked by another day of blazing sun, were contained quickly by rangers, smokejumpers and volunteers.

But two of the worst burned on.

Volunteer National Guardsmen were among the more than 400 men moving in on the flanks of one fire, which has claimed 13 lives and more than 6000 acres of woodland in mountains north of Helena.

They raced a gradually rising wind which threatened to blow the fire into dense, isolated timber to the east.

Planes shuttled men and materials into a second giant blaze, along the Slamon River, 110 miles north of Boise, Idaho. Spreading rapidly, it had covered 3000 acres.

Another huge fire, northeast of Idaho City, was brought under control after whipping across 2400 acres. So was a 400-acre fire west of Sheridan, Wyo., in the Big Horn Mountains.

Monument Stairs Closed as Result Of Death Leap

The 898 steps of the Washington Monument were blocked off temporarily yesterday as an aftermath to the death leap there Sunday of a 51-year-old Naval Ordinance Laboratory machinist.

Supt. Edward J. Kelly of National Capital Parks police said yesterday the closing was ordered to prevent further possible suicides, inspired by the weekend jump, and the gathering of morbid seekers on the steps.

No date has been set of the reopening of the stairs, he said, but added the closing would be only temporory. The Sunday leap victim was Paul L. Holker, 2215 Douglas st. nw., who climbed a safety railing and fell 240 feet down the Monument elevator shaft.

Lewd Shows Free to Police, 'Queen' Says

Los Angeles, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Vice Queen Brenda Allen let police see lewd shows at her Hollywood callhouse for nothing, but the movie crowd had to pay its way in, it was disclosed today in a transcript of the county grand jury's investigation of local vice conditions.

The shapely Miss Allen, whose charges that she bribed vice officers to let her operate a lush bordello helped touch off a grand jury investigation of local vice, described these shows as "circuses."

She said the shows, held in her house in the Hollywood hills, were open to all customers for a fee, but free to vice-squad officers.

"The way it was done—these circuses, I mean—the lights that I had were very, very blue lights, and they were very low, and we cleared out the center of the living room.

"We just had chairs and couches back against the wall and the show proceeds from there."

"The girls and the men can do anything they want to."

"That is in full view?" she was asked.

"Yes, sir."

She was hesitant about revealing the names of paying customers who liked the shows.

'For instance, there would be three or four men from the studios—I won't mention the names of those people because they are, you know, very nice, and they are professional," her testimony said.

She said Vice Squad Sergt. Charles Stoker, a key State witness in the vice investigation, had watched at least one of the shows and Sergt. E. V. Jackson, indicted for both perjury and bribery, saw "three or four" of them.

She told the grand jury she paid Stoker $100 a week for each girl she hired and Jackson $50 a week per girl.

Asked to state her occupation, Miss Allen replied simply:

"Prostitute."

"It's a business," she said at another point. "Just like any other business. You pay your money and you take your choice."

Another portion of the grand jury transcript quoted telephone conversations between Jackson and Miss Allen. She admitted she had sexual relations with Jackson over several weeks period.

In connection with these recorded telephone talks, Miss Allen said Stoker once told her he wanted to be her boy friend. But she had indicated in the telephone talks that she did not care for him.

"About the first thing I'll do to him is stick an icepick in his back," she was quoted.

Jackson was charged with both perjury and bribery in the jury's indictments, but Stoker was not named. The grand jury had indicated earlier it could find no corroboration for Miss Allen's charges against him.

The bulky grand jury transcript filed in Superior Court today was divided into 8 volumes and measured 12 inches thick.

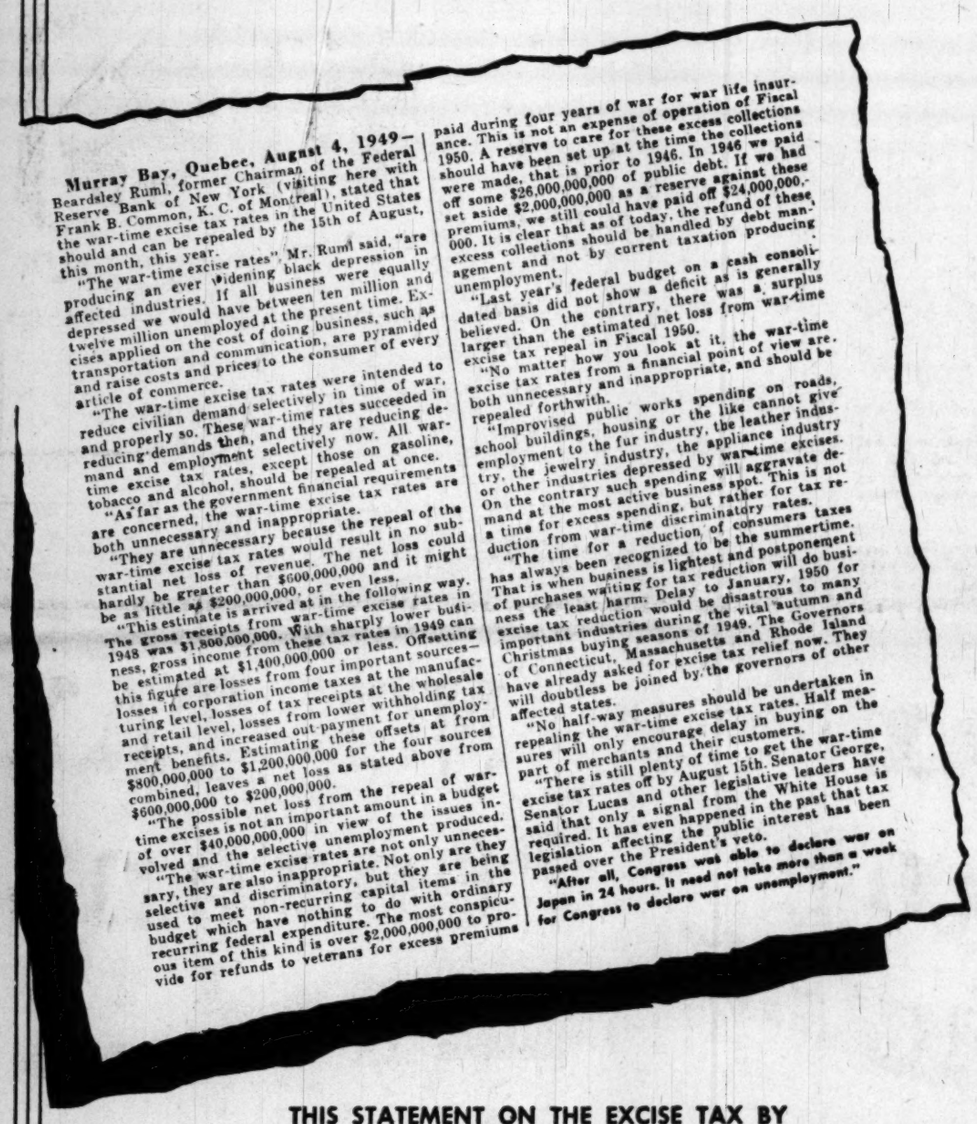
"Nothing can be done" has never been the American Way!

MR. PRESIDENT :—

You have made the statement that nothing can be done to repeal the war excise sales tax during this session of Congress. We must respectfully disagree!



Murray Bay, Quebec, August 4, 1949—Beardsley Ruml, former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York (visiting here with Frank B. Common, K. C. of Montreal), stated that the war-time excise tax rates in the United States should and can be repealed by the 15th of August, this month, this year.

"The war-time excise rates", Mr. Ruml said, "are producing an ever widening black depression in affected industries. If all business were equally depressed we would have between ten million and twelve million unemployed at the present time. Excises applied on the cost of doing business, such as transportation and communication, are pyramided and raise costs and prices to the consumer of every article of commerce.

"The war-time excise tax rates were intended to reduce civilian demand selectively in time of war, and properly so. These war-time rates succeeded in reducing demands then, and they are reducing demand and employment selectively now. All war-time excise tax rates, except those on gasoline, tobacco and alcohol, should be repealed at once.

"As far as the government financial requirements are concerned, the war-time excise tax rates are both unnecessary and inappropriate.

"They are unnecessary because the repeal of the war-time excise tax rates would result in no substantial net loss of revenue. The net loss could hardly be greater than $600,000,000 and it might be as little as $200,000,000, or even less.

"This estimate is arrived at in the following way. The gross receipts from war-time excise rates in 1948 was $1,800,000,000. With sharply lower business, gross income from these tax rates in 1949 can be estimated at $1,400,000,000 or less. Offsetting this figure are losses from four important sources—losses in corporation income taxes at the manufacturing level, losses of tax receipts at the wholesale and retail level, losses from lower withholding tax receipts, and increased out-payment for unemployment benefits. Estimating these offsets at from $800,000,000 to $1,200,000,000 for the four sources combined, leaves a net loss as stated above from $600,000,000 to $200,000,000.

"The possible net loss from the repeal of war-time excises is not an important amount in a budget of over $40,000,000,000 in view of the issues involved and the selective unemployment produced.

"The war-time excise rates are not only unnecessary, they are also inappropriate. Not only are they selective and discriminatory, but they are being used to meet non-recurring, capital items in the budget which have nothing to do with ordinary recurring federal expenditure. The most conspicuous item of this kind is over $2,000,000,000 to provide for refunds to veterans for excess premiums paid during four years of war for war life insurance. This is not an expense of operation of Fiscal 1950. A reserve to care for these excess collections should have been set up at the time the collections were made, that is prior to 1946. In 1946 we paid off some $26,000,000,000 of public debt. If we had set aside $2,000,000,000 as a reserve against these premiums, we still could have paid off $24,000,000,000. It is clear that as of today, the refund of these excess collections should be handled by debt management and not by current taxation producing unemployment.

"Last year's federal budget on a cash consolidated basis did not show a deficit as is generally believed. On the contrary, there was a surplus larger than the estimated net loss from war-time excise tax repeal in Fiscal 1950.

"No matter how you look at it, the war-time excise tax rates from a financial point of view are both unnecessary and inappropriate, and should be repealed forthwith.

"Improvised public works spending on roads, school buildings, housing or the like cannot give employment to the fur industry, the leather industry, the jewelry industry, the appliance industry or other industries depressed by war-time excises. On the contrary such spending will aggravate demand at the most active business spot. This is not a time for excess spending, but rather for tax reduction from war-time discriminatory rates.

"The time for a reduction of consumers taxes has always been recognized to be the summertime. That is when business is lightest and postponement of purchases waiting for tax reduction will do business the least harm. Delay to January, 1950 for excise tax reduction would be disastrous to many important industries during the vital autumn and Christmas buying seasons of 1949. The Governors of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island have already asked for excise tax relief now. They will doubtless be joined by the governors of other affected states.

"No half-way measures should be undertaken in repealing the war-time excise tax rates. Half measures will only encourage delay in buying on the part of merchants and their customers.

"There is still plenty of time to get the war-time excise tax rates off by August 15th. Senator George, Senator Lucas and other legislative leaders have said that only a signal from the White House is required. It has even happened in the past that tax legislation affecting the public interest has been passed over the President's veto.

"After all, Congress was able to declare war on Japan in 24 hours. It need not take more than a week for Congress to declare war on unemployment."

THIS STATEMENT ON THE EXCISE TAX BY BEARDSLEY RUML IS VITAL TO EVERY AMERICAN.

We suggest you read every word!

"Congress was able to declare war on Japan in 24 hours. It need not take more than a week for Congress to declare war on unemployment." And these taxes are one of the main causes of growing unemployment now.

We cannot wait. Delay to January, 1950 would be disastrous during the vital autumn and Christmas buying seasons of 1949. It would adversely affect the economy of the entire country. To quote the National Planning Association – a non-partisan organization representative of business, labor, agriculture and the professions:

> "The present structure of excise taxes discriminates between producers of taxed and untaxed goods and many of those taxes weigh most heavily on low income families."

We wish to call to your attention that the purpose of these taxes was to reduce civilian demand in time of war. That was necessary. They reduced demand then, but there is no reason why we should reduce demand and employment now. Furthermore, the repeal of these taxes would result in no substantial net loss of tax revenue!

At the time these taxes were put into effect, it was agreed that they would be removed six months after the end of the war. FOUR YEARS HAVE PASSED AND NOTHING HAS BEEN DONE!

For the benefit of every business facing unnecessary loss and every person facing unnecessary unemployment

The CIO, at its Constitutional Convention, Portland, Oregon November 1948, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved that all excise taxes not regulatory in character be repealed."

. . . WE ASK THAT THE WAR EXCISE TAX BE REPEALED NOW!

One on the Aisle—

'Retirement's' A Stage Gesture

By Richard L. Coe

SO INGRID BERGMAN says she's going to retire, does she?

You can't much blame the lady. Who wouldn't like to lay off—and eat—for a couple of years?

Still, it's a line that's been heard before. A glance at the downtown screens shows you several people who, for one reason or another' once were through on the screen. At work in Hollywood are scores more.

Mary Astor is at the Columbia with Clark Gable in "Any Number Can Play." Surely you remember a widely publicized incident about a sizzling diary and a gold key, which made people say Mary's box office career was over. Infrequent her appearances may be, the sight of the ever-youthful Mary always makes audiences sit up a big straighter.

Another of Gable's mates at the Columbia once seemed through—the veteran Marjorie Rambeau, whom an auto accident put out of commission for four years. Now Marjorie looks elegant as Ethel Barrymore in "Any Number Can Play."

Speaking of Ethel, there's a girl who retired a dozen times, but her seventieth birthday next Monday will bring her a Nation-wide radio salute from any number of celebrities from President Truman on down.

On the Capitol screen for "In the Good Old Summertime," Buster Keaton is back at work, in Technicolor, too. Buster was greeted by many friends in the flesh a few weeks ago at the Meridian Hill Theater in "Three Men on a Horse," but for nearly two decades Buster's name was off the boards.

Then there's Clara Bow. Clara, who retired twice, the latter for fully 17 years to mother the children she bore Rex Bell, is doing "Personal Appearance," that comical play about a movie queen, at a New Mexico summer theater this month. Hollywood's not far off on the comeback trail.

And think of the times Gloria Swanson retired. Each new title meant a fresh "through-with-it-all" statement to be followed, not long after, by another plunge, most recently into television. Now she's going to play herself, along with Erich Von Stroheim in "Sunset Boulevard," Paramount's paean to the good old days.

Not long ago Ramon Novarro was on the Warner screen in "We Were Strangers." Time was 20 years ago, he "retired to enter a monastery." You'll soon see him again in Metro's "Outriders" and he still says someday he'll enter a monastery.

Greta Garbo, the sphynx, has never, so far as I recall, said she was retiring. She just stopped making pictures, for any number of reasons. This fall, though, Greta will go before American cameras in Paris for a Balzac story, "The Duchess of Langeais," which Elisabeth Bergner once made in German, Edwige Feuillere in French.

Mack Sennett, Too

The producers, too, are increasingly catching on to the value of reels they have in storage. The record-breaking run of two W. C. Fields comedies at the Little, "The Bank Dick" and "My Little Chickadee," is a local reflection of this. The selling point seems to be Fields, more than the pictures. Nor should you discount the vast influence of that Saturday Evening Post series on Fields, which soon will be a book and a Reader's Digest reprint.

Eagle-Lion has settled on the Mack Sennett name for another revival. This will be from a batch of his old comedies.

Such a theme as this could go on and on. So I'm willing to bet that five years from now theaters will still be billing "Ingrid Bergman in....."

On Meridian Hill

Engaging Cast Pleases In Meridian's 'On the Town'

"ON THE TOWN," Meridian Hill Park's mini-musical, is an engaging show. Its principals are likable youngsters and last night's audience told them so.

How they've produced this on the open-air stage is a neat trick. Thanks to the leads, there's zest and know-how about the songs and comedy. A two-piano team, Dean Fuller and David Craig, take the place of an orchestra. Triple-duty sets achieve the basic requirements for the many scene shifts musicals demand.

This is the musical comedy Leonard Bernstein elaborated from the Ballet Theater's "Fancy Free." Betty Comden and Adolph Green contributed the book and lyrics. It was a hit of the '44-'45 season, with Nancy Walker, Jerome Robbins and Sono Osato heading the cast.

Jane Dulo Amusing

Some of its New York run lesser lights have now turned it into this cheerful "package" show now touring the struggle-n-sweat circuit. The slight yarn of three sailors touring New York loosely holds songs and sketches together.

Thanks to its players, the modest trick works. There is one Jane Dulo, who succeeded Nancy in the New York company and has since done night clubs. Jane has fun in the famed taxi-cab scene in which, as a bumptious taxi-driver, she urges a sailor to "Come Up to My Place."

There's a blond, good-looking hero with a surprisingly effective voice to sing "Lonely Town" and "Luck to Be Me." This chap's name is James Jewell and you'll like him.

Ruth Webb, as a lady anthropologist who's willing to experiment with men, not only is a smashing-looking creature, she also manages to sock home her fun, particularly in "Carried Away," that frantic duet in which Jonathan Lucas emphatically joins her.

Welcome Change in Diet

June Graham dances effectively as the lass who would be toney, but who must earn her artistic fodder by working at Coney Island. Don Weismuller plays a lively henchman to Miss Dulo and Barbara Joyce, quite unlike her attractive self, sports a comic role effectively.

As an addition of musical comedy to the town's heavily straight-play attractions, "On the Town" is a most welcome change. Naturally, it's not musical comedy as you once knew it at the National, but with all the limitations involved, it's a cheerful indication that a change of diet is a good thing.

Especially when such pleasant folk as these are in the leads and such able pianists as Fuller and Craig are on their ivories. I was about to say that it's a mighty cute evening, but cute's a word I've promised never, never to use. Still, you get the idea.—R. L. C.

It used to take too much time
On each office payday
To hike ten blocks to the bank
And put my dollars away.

When I'd finally get the chance
The money would be spent
So I never saved until I heard
How it could be sent.

'Twas then I opened my new account
And each payday would mail

Brannan Attacks Opponents of Plan

Columbia, Mo., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan today delivered a blistering attack on opponents of his controversial farm price support plan which already has been turned down by this session of Congress.

He told farmers in President Truman's home State that those who say the plan means farm "regimentation" are the "stand-patters" who have fought "every constructive farm program of the past 16 years." He flatly denied it would mean "more government in farming."

Brannan addressed the Missouri Farmers Association convention at the University of Missouri.

He warned that unless Congress puts a "realistic" floor under the farmer's buying power, there will be danger of a depression which might lead to an atomic war. He said the Aiken law of lower supports enacted by the Eightieth Congress and slated to go into effect on 1950 crops, does not provide adequate supports.

He described his own plan as "adequate, realistic, and efficient." It would provide record high Government supports for farmers, with consumers getting a price break on perishable foods. Instead of buying up these foods to hold up the market price, the Government would send production payment checks to farmers to make up the difference when prices dropped below support levels.

In rejecting even a trial run of this "production payment" plan, the House voted to continue wartime 90 per cent of parity supports for another year. Brannan directed his fire chiefly at the Aiken law of 60-90 per cent supports which goes into effect January 1, 1950, unless Senate and House agree on a substitute.

Adm. Johnson

Marylander Heads Navy Intelligence

By The Associated Press

Rear Adm. Felix L. Johnson of Leonardtown, Md., will be the new director of Naval intelligence.

The Navy in making the announcement said that Johnson, a former director of Naval public information, would take over at the end of this month when he is relieved as commander of destroyers in the Atlantic Fleet.

Johnson succeeds Rear Adm. Thomas B. Inglis, Houghton Lake, Mich., who has been assigned as commander in the training command in the Pacific Fleet. His headquarters will be at San Diego, Calif.

Rear Adm. Edmund T. Wooldridge, assistant Chief of Naval Operations for international affairs, is relieving Johnson as commander of destroyers in the Atlantic Fleet. Wooldridge's post is being filled by Capt. Howard E. Orem, Klamath Falls, Ore., who has been his deputy.

Rear Adm. Willard A. Kitts, III, a native of Oswego, N. Y., has been ordered to take command of the Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va., when relieved as commander of the Pacific Fleet Training Command.

VFW Group to Meet

The Adm. Robert E. Peary Ship No. 427, VFW, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the clubhouse at 1300 New Hampshire ave. nw. to initiate new members.

Her measurements are: bust, 36 inches; waist, 23 inches; hips, 36 inches.

Bebe Shopp, the Minnesota milkmaid who won the 1948 "Miss America" contest, was 5 feet, 9 inches tall, and weighed 140 pounds. Her bust measured 37 inches, her waist 26 and her hips 33.

As "Miss Washington," Miss Hayes will receive prizes valued at $5000, WWDC said.

Prizes and their donors include: a 1949 Nash automobile (Capital Garage); RCA-Victor television set (from any Washington dealer); Siberian Squirrel cape (Saks Furs); matched Oshkosh luggage (Camalier & Buckley); three evening gowns, a tailored suit and dress (Model Shop); Revere movie camera and projector (Kent Jewelers); shoes and handbags valued at $100 (William-Allen Shoes).

Miss Agee as runner-up will receive a $150 Lohengrin diamond ring from Bates Jewelers.

Two Miss America's have been from the District. Margaret Gorman was Miss America of 1921, and Venus Ramey was Miss America of 1944.

reconstruction plans would include a bond issue repayable in 20 years, loans to farmers, and businessmen by development banks, and a moratorium on payments by inhabitants of the quake zone, where 300,000 live.

The Ecuadorian Embassy in Washington announced sponsorship of an emergency relief committee which will use contributions to provide medical supplies, clothing, food and housing for the disaster-stricken. The committee also is seeking volunteer doctors to work in Ecuador. Contributors and volunteers were asked to contact the embassy, 2125 Leroy pl. nw. Telephone Republic 2008.]

An emergency airlift is hauling supplies into the quake zones, and bringing out injured survivors to cities with hospital facilities.

United States Army and Navy freight planes in the entire Caribbean area were being readied to start another mercy airlift of doctors, nurses and medical supplies.

Some food has been ferried by air, but the most serious immediate problem is to get water fit to drink. All water systems were crushed in the quake area, and streams were pitched out of their courses, or dammed by landslides.

Senor Quirino's Visit

President Quirino of the Philippine Republic is not a total stranger in Washington. When he visited this Capital two years ago as Vice President of the Philippines, he had a hearty welcome. The American people recognized him as a long-time friend of the United States. Now that he is visiting us as President of the Philippines, the welcome to him is doubly warm, for it carries the general feeling of friendship in this country for the Filipino people.

It is an appropriate moment for an exchange of views between President Quirino and top American officials, including President Truman. The Filipino leader undoubtedly brings first-hand information as to the trend of events in the Far East and as to the Filipinos' reactions to those events. In turn, our own officials will be in a position to give him a better understanding of the repercussions that the revolution in China is producing in this part of world. Certainly President Quirino will be able to get here a clearer picture of the over-all Far Eastern problem in its relation to the rest of the world than he could have gotten from his recent conference with Chiang Kai-shek at Baguio. The statement he issued after this meeting, suggesting a Pacific union to fight communism, completely ignored the tragic weakness of the forces that Chiang once represented in China—a weakness now fully exposed by the State Department's White Paper.

President Quirino must be deeply concerned about the spread of communism in Asia. His background and his convictions are those of a democratic leader devoted to the cause of popular government. In view of the presidential election in the Philippines on November 8, he is naturally eager to develop a concrete program for meeting the menace. But it must be evident in Washington, even if it is not in Manila, that no program can be built upon the quicksand on which Chiang Kai-shek is now trying to stand.

Clothes Horses

Hot weather, we rediscovered during the recent wave, is not conducive to mental exercise. But it provides optimum conditions for observing the idiosyncrasies as well as the anatomy of the human animal. We took the opportunity to observe these to the best of our ability while the thermometer boiled over, and now that the heat has abated somewhat we are trying to puzzle out some sense in what we saw.

For instance, a goodly number of females attired themselves in what we understand are called "sun dresses." This abbreviated covering was worn not only by practicing sun-worshippers in the direct pursuit of epidermal adumbration, but also by female shoppers on the streets and in the stores and by office girls at their desks. It seemed to us not only an attractive but an eminently sensible method of beating the heat.

On the other hand, we observed among many males a curious reluctance or inability to accommodate their attire to the temperature. In all the same situations where the feminine sex looked cool and comfortable (relatively speaking) the ordinary man suffered himself to be encased in the same tight collar, tie and jacket. That these all might be stained with perspiration seemed to make them no less necessary, somehow, to his comfort. Our observation, however, was that a man in a clean sport shirt and light-weight slacks looked and was more admirable than the one in a wilted and sweaty collar, tie and jacket.

We pursued this line of observation into several places where its results showed particular inconsistencies. In at least one of the clubs of Washington, where women are segregated in a special section, the male members are nevertheless forbidden to appear in the presence of their fellows without a jacket. In more than one public eating place a collection of soiled and unpressed jackets is kept on hand. The man who arrives immaculately dressed in summer sports clothes cannot eat there unless he dons one of these things. But his wife or girl friend can enter even though her shoulders and midriff are bare.

Why is this? We had intended to put our minds to this puzzle, but it seems to be getting hot again, so we will leave the question with you. As for us, we are heading for the nearest store to buy a stack of sport shirts—which we will wear without a jacket wherever we please. The heat wave taught us our lesson.

Free World Defense

Aside from the calm and well-reasoned general arguments that Secretary of State Acheson laid before two Senate committees yesterday, there was one especially reassuring aspect of his testimony. "The quickest way we can accelerate the strengthening of the defense mechanism of Europe without impairing its reviving economy," he said, "is by sharing some of our own military strength." A few moments later he spoke of transferring some of our military potential to western Europe. "It is simply common sense," he added "to shift part of our strength, which at the moment is the major element of strength in the Atlantic community, to the point where it may be needed first and can be used with quick effectiveness." With this we heartily concur.

While in the later questioning Secretary Acheson resisted any reduction in the $1,450,000,000 requested for the military assistance program, his willingness to "share" our strength seems to imply that a substantial part of the cost of MAP could be taken out of our own military budget. Whether or not that was his meaning, it seems to us to make good sense. By strengthening our first line of defense in Europe we can get along with a less costly military establishment in this country. Incidentally, acceptance of that reasoning would disarm another large group of critics who believe the program as it stands is too costly.

The arguments of Senators Vandenberg and George against excessive costs are impressive. Secretary Acheson pointed out that the Brussels Treaty countries are already spending the equivalent of five and a half billion dollars on their defenses. With that substantial sum supplemented by American aid and with funds from both sources channeled into one unified defense system for the Atlantic community, every participating country could attain greater security, without increasing the total outlay of funds.

The weakest point in Mr. Acheson's testimony, in our opinion, is the lack of assurance that the program will produce a genuinely unified defense system in the Atlantic community. The council to be set up under the North Atlantic Treaty, he said, will appoint a defense committee charged with making recommendations for implementing the military clauses of the treaty. He anticipates that this will lead to the development of integrated defense planning—that each member nation will be assigned specific duties and functions with a division of labor that will attain a maximum effectiveness out of the total effort. That hope is widely shared, but the arms program could be accepted with a much easier feeling if this result were assured instead of being a rather nebulous aspiration on the part of the State Department.

It is not, of course, a hastily concocted plan that is called for. General Marshall hinted the other day that such a plan might be a handicap. What is wanted is assurance that MAP will in actual operation be fitted into a single defense system for the entire Atlantic community. The pact which the free nations of this area have entered into means that separate national defense units are obsolete. The free world can find security only in a unity of strategic planning and command comparable to that which the Communist world has already attained. It seems to us imperative that the arms program be securely wedded to this fundamental objective from its very beginning.

Gulag Fodder

According to reports made public by the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London, collective farming experiments and other economic innovations in the satellite countries of eastern Europe have deprived about 10 million peasants of any means of employment. The probable fate of these persons will be deportation to the Gulags, or slave labor camps, of Soviet Russia, or, if the transportation problem proves too complicated, the system of slave labor, like all the other Communist contributions to twentieth century civilization, may be introduced at home.

Experts of the institute in their survey of the situation in eastern Europe, published in the Chatham House Review, assert that the effort to convert the Balkan countries overnight from an agrarian into an industrial economic pattern of life has precipitated an economic crisis of the first magnitude. Alarmed by the consequences of their imitations of the famous Russian five-year plans, the leaders of the Communist regimes are now attempting to undo some of the damage. In Poland and Bulgaria the pace of collectivization has been drastically slowed down. One difficulty seems to be a political instinct on the part of the peasants in those countries, who, it appears, have organized effective underground resistance movements and have thus provided a serious problem even for totalitarian police systems. It is probable that the situation is affording a good deal of sardonic amusement to Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, who is said to have broken with the Cominform on this issue of collectivization.

Mass deportations from the Balkan countries to the Soviet Gulags have actually been in progress since 1945, says Gen. Nicholae Radescu, former Prime Minister of Romania, in a brochure on the subject recently published in New York by the Commission of Inquiry Into Forced Labor. General Radescu estimates the number deported from Romania alone at 247,000. Of these, nearly half are Romanian nationals of German origin, many of whom did not survive the long journey to Asiatic Russia and few of whom, apparently, were alive at the end of the year.

Since 1944, when the provinces of Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina were annexed for a second time to the Soviet Union, more than 850,000 natives of Romanian origin have been transported beyond the Urals and have been replaced by Russian colonists of Mongolian stock. Here, observes General Radescu, are authentic instances of the crime of genocide, which has been designated by the General Assembly as a crime against humanity. Meanwhile, says the general, the economic and agricultural disorganization of Romania under Communist rule is reflected in the fact that the average yield of grain per hectare of land fell within three years from 1160 to 750 kilograms. The quota of grain demanded by way of tax from owners of farms of less than 3 hectares is said to be 1000 kilograms per hectare.

Thus the grandiose figures of the Royal Institute concerning human wreckage in the Balkans are not at all incredible. Meanwhile it is interesting to note that the Russian propaganda no longer bothers to deny the existence of the Gulags. The latest fashion is rather to describe them as places which combine all the best features of American country clubs, Viennese amusement parks, English country houses and Swiss sanatoria.

Last Wednesday at Geneva, for example, Comrade Arutiunian, Soviet delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Council, replied to the charges of the British delegate, Mr. Corley Smith, who recently made public what he said were photostatic copies of the Russian "corrective labor codex," which described the means used in obtaining recruits and replacements for the Gulags. Mr. Smith had estimated the population of these camps at about 10 million persons. Comrade Arutiunian, after the usual courtesies in which he described Mr. Smith as a tool of the American militarists and a professional disciple of the late Herr Goebbels, went on to contrast the abject bondage and misery of British wage slaves and the humane and reeducational atmosphere of the Gulags.

Force Of Nature

The earthquake in Ecuador ranks neither high nor low among disasters of the kind. Its death toll, which, it is now feared, may reach as high as 6000 persons, is higher than the 425 casualities in the 1906 San Francisco quake and fire. But it is far below the 100,000 deaths in the Japanese catastrophe of 1923, to say nothing of the 300,000 people thought to have perished in India in 1737.

Statistics, however, have only a cold-blooded relation to any particular disaster. An earthquake, when it strikes in an urban region, is a particularly heart-rending work of nature. The forces are so profound and tremendous and the consequences so terrifying as to confound mere man. Unable either to predict the occurrence of earthquakes or, if that were possible, to prevent them, men can only stand in awe, bury the dead, and clean up the debris.

To the latter tasks, the Ecuadoreans are moving as best they can—with the compassionate sympathy and assistance of their fellow Americans in this and other republics. We are glad that the United States is in a position to be of help and that our public and private agencies are hastening to give that help in full measure as a token of the brotherhood of all men before nature's nonracial, nonreligious, nonnational, nondiscriminatory majesty.

Mission To Norway

When the Howard University Players last November put on a production of Ibsen's "The Wild Duck," they invited members of the Norwegian Embassy to see the show. It proved to be a happy thought. The Norwegians were much impressed, and their government invited the Players to come to Norway for repeat performances.

An invitation is one thing, the trip itself is another. Not until the dollars were available could the Howard students and their coaches accept the invitation. That hurdle has now been surmounted; on August 31 a group of 21 students and 3 faculty members will embark on a tour of Scandinavia, putting on "The Wild Duck" and other plays in Oslo, Copenhagen, and perhaps also in Stockholm.

If the tour is as successful as the arrangements for it have been, it will be a triumph of international cultural relations. Credit for making it possible goes to the Norwegian Embassy, to Norwegian-Americans who raised about half of the transportation expense, to Mr. Blevins Davis, who has underwritten the rest, and to the State Department cultural relations people who have greased the machinery. It seems to us an excellent example of good will and good sense all around.

FRUIT FOR THE WARY

Yellow is the corn under the green husk.
Under the thin drift of silk
Lie the honey and the milk.
Over the peach the furry skin
Curves to hold the gift within.
The melon builds a sturdy wall
To hold the precious water back.
But the thimble-fashioned berry
Offers sweetness unafraid
In the summer sun and shade.
Succulent and red and ripe,
It tempts the trusting and the wary.
The grasping hand receives the stain
Red as are the greedy lips
Where the berry-heart has lain.

"Bailey Case"

We would like to commend the strong position taken in your editorial of August 2 that Dorothy Bailey should not have been dismissed from her Government job on grounds of disloyalty without confrontation of her accusers and an opportunity to refute their charges. At the same time we wish to protest most vehemently your giving currency to an assertion that impugns the integrity of another group of Federal employes. We refer to your reproduction of the statement of her counsel that the allegation that she was a Communist was a result of malicious gossip growing out of a bitter fight within the United Public Workers Union and your own observation of the real possibility that she was a target of malice because of this fight. Although we do not know whether the charges of disloyalty are true, we do know that there is no truth whatever in the allegation that the union opponents furnished any information upon which the charges were based.

We have been and continue to be actively engaged in the fight against the UPW leadership. But we were in no way responsible for the charges of disloyalty against Miss Bailey. The description of the informants by Chairman Richardson "as experience" would alone seem to refute the charge that the informants were ordinary union members. In addition, before Miss Bailey's appeal was heard, we advised one of her attorneys that we knew of no one in the opposition group who had even been questioned and have since confirmed that no one in this group has furnished any information about her. Moreover, the members of this group are all known to Miss Bailey. Yet no attempt was made to find out whether any of them had given information against her nor whether they would be willing to appear before the loyalty board for examination or cross-examination. In these circumstances it is difficult to understand why one who complains of the use of improper evidence should seriously malign another group without any evidence at all.

We regard the charge carried in the editorial as serious because of our complete agreement with the principle that employes should not be found disloyal without an opportunity to confront their accusers. Our members, as individuals and as a group, have consistently fought against the denial of the privilege. The dismissal of employes on the evidence of anonymous informers offends our views of basic civil rights. We would have no part of this practice.

Moral Breakdown

Since the end of the war all you have been hearing is communism — communism and its great threat to American democracy — communism and its undermining of our fundamental ideals and so on.

I fail to see any logic in assailing communism when, at the same time, we sit back and smugly condone doctrines more subtle and destructive than all the totalitarian doctrines in the world.

The doctrines to which I refer are those of godlessness and materialism, immorality and self-gratification, divorce and family breakup. It is like a cancer—silently gnawing away at the insides of this great Nation The Washington Post seems to be goading this on by giving immorality, sex crimes, paganism and divorce most attractive and spicy treatment. Why not, instead of articles on divorce try a series on successful marriages and portray the beauty of a good family?

"Belasco Theater"

Senators Paul Douglas and Raymond Baldwin have introduced a bill (S. 2167) directing the Federal Works Administrator to lease Government-owned Belasco Theater to ANTA (American National Theater and Academy), thereby restoring legitimate theater to the District of Columbia.

Your admirable editorial July 11 must have heartened thousands of Washingtonians starved for live drama, but I wonder how many of your readers realize what tremendous benefits ANTA's management of Belasco would mean?

For this would be no ordinary commercial undertaking. ANTA is chartered by Congress to "bring more theater to more people," and has sparked theatrical initiative all over the country. It has developed professional regional and repertory shows (Salt Lake City and Dallas theaters are two outstanding successes), has sent delegates to international theater conferences; was responsible or made possible the American production of Hamlet this year at Elsinore, Denmark.

With ANTA as lessee the Belasco would not only give the customary evening and matinee performances; there would be a studio for tryout shows by new dramatists; opportunities for experimental stagecraft and lighting; Saturday morning plays for children so that a whole generation would grow up appreciative of spoken verse and prose.

"History's Verdict"

I want to express my gratitude for Malvina Lindsay's clear and stimulating article on August 4. Today it is no longer true that we have nothing to fear than fear. The threat to our civilization is very real. Armaments, the Marshall Plan, the Atlantic Pact, all this is necessary but it does not provide for more than a very short period of security. Definite security can only be achieved by some kind of world order. If we fail and a third world war occurs, it will be due to our inertia during this brief respite.

Much study and imagination are needed to prepare and check plans for an improved United Nations. The veto, for instance, can neither remain as it is nor simply be discarded without substitute. There should be research and discussion groups of political scientists and lawyers to make various proposals so that the best can be chosen. Congress should allow money for the research. The doubt whether Russia will consent to any better world organization, is no excuse for inaction.

We have only a few years left. If they are not used to the utmost—by our leaders through elaborating plans, by the people through the urgent demand for enduring security—our responsibility will be unbearable.

Virginia Poll Tax

In your August 6 editorial, "Record Vote," you refer to the Virginia poll tax as a "tax which Virginia imposes in April on the right to vote in August." Actually, this was the poll tax for the calendar year 1948. It became due and payable on December 5, 1948, and tax bills were sent out to all who owed it, in November 1948. April, 1949, was merely the deadline by which time the tax, already five months delinquent, had to be paid if the taxpayer wished to vote in the August primary.

Home Rule Poll

Results of a poll taken by Dr. George Gallup published in your August 5 issue, are calculated to give the impression that he has submitted to the people of the country the question whether Washington should have home rule, and he reports 65 per cent answered the single question submitted by him in the affirmative.

In the first paragraph of Dr. Gallup's article he states, in effect, that home rule for Washington, D. C., is favored by a large majority of persons questioned through the Nation by his organization and says a home rule bill for the District is now pending in Congress.

This is a strange procedure inasmuch as Dr. Gallup, in taking the poll, has given absolutely no information of the contents of the so-called home rule bills pending before the Committee on the District of Columbia of the House of Representatives.

He has asked the single question: "Do you think the people of Washington should elect their city officials—or should they continue to be appointed by the President?"

The people at large of our country are not informed of the present municipal form of government in the District of Columbia and Dr. Gallup does not enlighten them on this subject beyond saying that at present people who live in Washington, D. C., cannot vote for their city officials since they are appointed by the President of the United States. He does not tell them that the people of Washington have no representation in Congress, which makes all their laws and must continue to do so under the Constitution.

If the people of a city in the Middle West were considering a change in their municipal form of government, would Dr. Gallup consider it his duty to poll the people of the Atlantic and Pacific seaboard cities as to what they think the people of the Midwest city should be in favor of, and have the results published in the newspapers of the Midwest city?

If Dr. Gallup or any other poll-taker desires to be helpful in informing the people of the Nation at large on the question of whether the people of the District of Columbia should have full rights of suffrage or not, he should state the matter fully and fairly and then ask a question so framed that people approached by poll-takers can express an intelligent opinion on the matter.

As an amendment to the Constitution is necessary to give the people of the District of Columbia real home rule, so far as that is possible under the Constitution, he should have his poll-takers present the question simply and squarely:

"Do you favor complete suffrage for the people of the District of Columbia as citizens of the United States which will include amending the Constitution to give them representation in numbers in accordance with their population of 900,000; and having granted them participation in the body which the Constitution requires shall make their laws do you favor their having the right to decide what form of municipal government they will choose?"

Washington Calling

Strategic Bombing

VARIOUS AND sundry investigations are beginning to take the headlines from the waning session of Congress. One result is to divert attention from the lapses and failures, the stalemate and the plain and simple balkiness of what can hardly be considered a distinguished performance.

One of the investigations is concerned with the conduct of several picturesque figures in and around the White House. They are alleged to have used their influence to get profitable contracts for friends.

This makes for diverting reading, since it is always exciting to start a fox—and especially a highly colored fox that talks back—with the chase in full view. If these characters are guilty, they should be punished.

BUT THERE is another investigation that can produce something more than a brief sensation. That is the investigation ordered by the House into the B-36 bomber and the policy of the Air Force in concentrating so much of the air budget on this long-range bomber.

Here, too, sensational charges involving contracts and alleged collusion are involved. There is, however, another phase of the inquiry that is infinitely more important even if all the sensational rumors should be proved true. Or it could be more important if the investigating committee has the courage and the objectivity to go into it.

That is to try to appraise the role of strategic bombing—the obliteration of the enemy's cities. This is down on the committee's schedule. Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee says that the investigation will definitely cover the point.

But high-ranking Navy officers have heard the disquieting report that the issue of strategic bombing and its potentialities will be glossed over. They are fearful that some kind of deal has been made so that the public will not get anything like a true picture, correcting what Navy men believe is a deliberate and relentless propaganda campaign in behalf of a blitz, 30-day victory in a painless war.

This becomes all the more important since Gen. Omar N. Bradley has confirmed what has been widely known—that America's role at the outset of a war would be to drop the atomic bomb on the enemy's cities. Air Force planners have talked about 70 strategic targets to be obliterated in Soviet Russia, thereby paralyzing the enemy at the outset of a war.

Such an attack would destroy several million civilians. Whether it would win a war is an open question. Whether it would win the peace is still another question which almost no one seems to consider.

A NAVY airman, Admiral Daniel V. Gallery, had the courage to raise some of these points the other day. It took courage, in view of the stern orders to keep away from controversy, to speak as frankly as he did in the Saturday Evening Post. Gallery wrote:

"Wholesale destruction of the populated areas of an enemy country is a poor way to promote lasting peace. It merely sows the seeds of hate for another war. All over Europe we are discovering to our sorrow now the penalties which the victor pays in the postwar peace for indiscriminate destruction. A large part of the billions now being spent in the European Recovery Program can be charged to this account."

Gallery quoted passages from the summary report of the United States Strategic Bombing Survey to show that even though German cities were plastered with bombs and hundreds of thousands of civilians killed, military production went right on. In some instances it even increased, after the heaviest raids.

According to the bombing survey more than 2,500,000 tons of bombs were dropped on Germany. Yet an invasion by ground forces finally conquered Hitler's armies. And Germany, as compared to Russia, is a small, compact country.

Before these matters are once and for all concluded, it would be a good idea if the American people got some understanding of what is at stake. Back of all the big talk are some fearsome possibilities. If the investigation could get the facts in perspective, presenting a picture that most of us who are not experts can comprehend, the committee would perform a great national service.

The military pieces are rapidly falling into place. This may be the last chance to get a clear look at the underpinnings on which our security appears to be based.

Daylight Saving

Several letters have recently appeared relative to the merits of "fast time." This writer, with many others, prefers standard time, and does not relish these never-ending hot evenings.

In the city, children chase up and down the streets until midnight, getting into mischief. The radios shrill and sweaty humanbeings amble about trying to find something to do until cooling breezes stir, making sleep possible. Then after they do sink into a sound slumber, they are rudely awakened by an alarm clock reminding them of another long summer day of labor.

It is indeed gratifying to know that man cannot change the rising of the sun, stop the changing seasons or interfere with many of the lovely, welcome things of life. LUCILLE A. CALMES.

A Communication

Mr. Nathan Defends Steel Wage Report

By Robert R. Nathan Consulting Economist

I HAVE READ with considerable interest the July 28 communication from Elisha M. Friedman concerning the report which we prepared for the steel industry.

In the first place, we specifically point out in our overall report that "from many points of view, an economic adjustment through price decreases is preferable to an adjustment through wage increases, provided the adjustment is not accompanied by substantial reductions in production, employment and income. The benefits are more evenly spread among all consumers, the fixed income groups are benefited, and lower prices might induce larger business spending as well as consumer spending." What we object to is the fact that prices have not come down substantially and that there has been a clearcut tendency for business to cut production and employment much more than prices. As a matter of fact, the consumers' price index is today higher than it was last February.

Mr. Friedman implies that labor possesses great monopoly power. There is no monopoly power in labor comparable to that which is now manifest in the price area, where we find that a recession has come about without any substantial reductions in prices. If labor really had monopolistic power it would have improved its position in the last few years. Actually there has been a serious deterioration in labor's position relative to the position of those who benefit from profits. The relationships between wages and profits have revealed a tremendous shift to the latter category in the past three years, and this is hardly a reflection of monopolistic practice or monopolistic power on the part of labor. The monopoly lies on the other side of the fence.

MR. FRIEDMAN'S reference to base periods is almost too amusing to be given any attention. Whenever anyone uses the period of the 1930's, which he now proposes as a base period instead of the wartime period, there is great criticism and a hue and cry arises from the ultraconservative area because an old and ancient and irrelevant base is used. Now that we use the postwar or war period as points of departure, Mr. Friedman finds that we should go back and use the period of the 30's. If we had used any years in the 1930's as a base period, the distortions clearly revealed in our report would have been much, much greater than are now shown.

In one part of his letter Mr. Friedman bemoans the fact that profits really are not very high and yet in another part of his letter he strongly concludes that business should reduce prices and will reduce prices. If profits are not high, then certainly business cannot afford to reduce prices. He refuses to open his eyes and see what has actually happened in the price area. He states that if the price of scrap continues to remain low, competition will cut the price of finished steel. One can merely look at the history to find that the steel industry has always adhered closely to the view that the demand for steel is relatively inflexible and will not increase when prices are lower. The industry has benefited materially from very substantial reductions in material costs and yet they have given no indication whatsoever of a willingness to cut prices. Actually, between 1937 and 1938 the production of steel dropped nearly 44 per cent whereas steel prices declined little more than 2 per cent.

Either Mr. Friedman has not read our report carefully or he refuses to recognize certain facts pointed out in the report. We clearly indicate that since 1939 the buying power of hourly earnings in the steel industry has risen only 14 per cent, whereas the buying power of the return on investment is up 165 per cent, or 14 times as much as the increase in real earnings per hour. Both of these are expressed in fixed prices and not in current prices.

It is especially interesting to note the complete degree of inconsistency in Mr. Elisha Friedman's point of view. On the one hand he talks about the fact that we are in a recession and implies that we should all stand by and wait for the situation to somehow or other correct itself. Then in the end he comes around and really supports the idea that we should do something to achieve sustained and full employment. This is completely reminiscent of the Hoover approach of letting nature take its course and waiting for prosperity to come around some hidden corner. This is the kind of defeatism which is fundamentally characteristic of those who really have no confidence in the free enterprise system.

TRADITIONALLY, we have booms and busts in our economy. Most thinking people today agree that we cannot permit serious depressions to occur and recur again and again without seriously endangering the continuity of our free and competitive society. Actually the system which we have today is much less competitive than would be desirable. Theoretically, with a decline in demand there should be a substantial reduction in prices so that demand would increase and we would have an upturn in business after a short decline. However, historically, even when we had more active and vigorous competition than at the present time, we went through very serious and long declines with substantial unemployment and serious losses in production. Today, with greater rigidity in the price structure, as clearly manifested in the experience of recent months, it appears to be complete and total wishful thinking to contemplate an adjustment taking place through a substantial reduction in prices. Apparently this reduction in prices will only come about as a result of mass unemployment and serious losses to the nation in production. Mr. Friedman completely and totally ignores the experience of the past 10 months. I would like to see prices decline and bring about an increase in total demand. However, there just does not seem to be such an alternative for us.

For those who are not in industries which are making substantial profits and who, therefore, will not share in wage increases, they will benefit through the maintenance of full employment. If business were to decline much more, they would suffer unemployment and lowered incomes. Wage adjustments in the high profit industries will increase buying power and consumption and will tend to bring about full employment and high levels of prosperity which will benefit all people in the society. A depression will harm all people, including the organized workers as well as the fixed income groups.

Ohio Man Would Aid War-Time Graft Probe

Newark, Ohio., Aug. 8 (AP).—William L. White of Newark today offered to testify in any official investigation of wartime graft. He made the offer in a telegram to President Truman.

The Newark businessman, a candidate for the Democratic nomination as United States Senator, gave no details of alleged graft he said he uncovered as a mechanical engineer at an Army embarkation camp at Newport News, Va., during World War II.

White said he did not make the offer to further his political career.

Quirino Here To Boost Pact

Philippine President on "your visit among us" and declared both nations "will be found on the same side" in the "new struggle in the world today, a struggle of ideas, a struggle that ignores national boundaries and even national loyalties."

That obvious reference to world-wide communism was as far as the President went, however, in suggesting any new agreement with the gallant island Republic now coming back after long years of Japanese wartime occupation.

Quirino, in turn, declared he realized "that immediate problems of even greater magnitude press upon your attention. Then he added:

"It is a most reassuring indication of your sincere appreciation of what my country can contribute, however modestly, to the progress, the peace and happiness of our two countries and perhaps of the world as a whole, that you should pause and afford the Philippines opportunity to discuss with you matters that vitally affect our peoples at home and abroad."

President Truman took Quirino, a stocky man of about his own height, to Blair House for tea last night.

After his Washington visit, Quirino will go to New York Thursday to talk with Francis Cardinal Spellman and others.

Miss Kellems Loses $6133 as U. S. Tax Penalty

Mystic, Conn., Aug. 8 (AP).—Agents of the U. S. Department of Internal Revenue today seized $6133 from the funds of the Kellems Cable Grip Co. here today as a penalty for failure of the concern to make direct payment to the Government on its employes' withholding taxes.

The seizure, said Miss Vivien Kellams, head of the concern, was made at the Mystic River National Bank in this village, a part of the town of Groton. Miss Kellems removed her factory from Westport to Stonington, Conn., June 1 after a long zoning-law row with Westport authorities.

Miss Kellems emphasized today's seizure was entirely a penalty. "Every penny in withholding taxes had been paid, and the Government admits it," she asserted.

Early last year Miss Kellems announced that if she was to be required to deduct taxes withheld from her employes, she would expect to be paid the cost of making the deductions.

Federal authorities disagreed, and seized the money they said was due. Thereafter Miss Kellems' employes trooped to the postoffice to make out money orders covering their deductions.

Truman Fanning Hysteria for War, Pravda Insists

Moscow, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Communists Party newspaper Pravda said today that President Truman was "fanning war hysteria" to cover up the "complete failure" of American foreign policy.

A four-column editorial said the President was pursuing a "reactionary, Utopian and adventurist" policy, and had demonstrated a complete inability to face facts.

"The Marshall Plan is busting at all the seams," Pravda said. "England and Western Europe are undergoing a severe economic crisis.

The policy of supporting the American stooge Chiang Kai-shek has resulted in complete bankruptcy in China. Greece is a monstrous economic ruin. And what remains is the notorious cold war against the Soviet Union—the main invention patented by Mr. Truman.

$4.5 Billion Home Loan Bill Advances

By the United Press

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday approved a broad new $4,500,000,000 housing bill designed to make it easier for lower and middle income families, including veterans, to own their own homes.

The measure, which includes provision for direct Government loans to veterans and housing cooperatives, was sent to the floor by a 7-to-5 vote.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) said some members "strongly disapprove" of some portions and will fight them on the floor.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), the bill's author, said it is designed to liberalize home financing, thus providing more construction of homes for lower and middle income groups.

"Taken together with the public and farm housing bill passed earlier in the session it should make it possible to achieve the long-sought goal of 1,500,000 housing units a year," he said.

The Administration, meanwhile, swung into action on its previously passed public housing program by mailing out application forms and instructions to 500 housing authorities in 42 States.

The Senate committee bill would continue and liberalize present Government insurance of home loans, in addition to providing for new programs of direct Federal housing loans and other features.

this series might have been due to luck. Drs. Hart and Moody do not say. They cite it as a possible result of timing.

The Duke evidence is both animal and human. Rats were bred with the timing carefully regulated. It is easier to know a rat's fertile period. The normal ratio of male rats was increased by late insemination by percentages varying from 149 to 255. At the most, more than twice as many males as females were born.

Studies were made on 65,000 pairs of dizygotic twins, which means twins from separate eggs. These twins can be either two girls, two boys or a boy and a girl. Under the usual sex ratios of human beings, there would be about as many boys as girls among these twins.

But the normal ratio didn't work. In 59 per cent of these twinnings, both babies were the same sex. This seems to bear out the idea that more early conceptions are females, and more late are male.

7 Area Boys Set For Model Plane Contest in Detroit

Seven contestants from the District area have been invited to participate in Plymouth Motor Corporation's Third International Model Plane contest in Detroit, Mich., August 22-29.

They are: Donald Struttmann, 16, of 7313 Welleck st., and Stephen M. Russell, 15, of 7212 Justin st., both District Heights; David B. Weisman, 15, of 3732 Kanawha st. nw.; James H. Brakefield, 18, of 3106 Mt. Pleasant and Carl R. Wheeley, 19, of 1324 Fairmont st., all Washington; and Bebe Barron, 16, and Roger L. Barron, 14, both of Springfield, Va.

The boys recently qualified for the event which offers $8750 in Savings Bonds and 167 trophies.

V-Bombs Tripled British Casualties

London, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—German V-weapons tripled British civilian casualties between 1943 and 1944, figures released by the Registrar General's offices showed today.

More than 9000 civilians were killed by enemy action in 1944 while 3000 died by enemy action in 1943, the reports said.

However, the 1944 figures were less than half the totals during the blitz days of 1940 and 1941.

2 Drugs Help Fight on Heart Disease

Too little is known of the processes to diagnose accurately the approach of coronary insufficiency before that first attack. Doctors can fight only to stave off death from the initial assault and work to prevent recurrences in those saved.

Angina pectoris, commonly thought of as a heart disease, is but the excruciatingly painful symtom of coronary insufficiency. It is generally described as a crushing pressure on the chest with a flash pain down the left arm so intense that death may seem more desirable than its return.

Heparin, new in its use against coronary insufficiency, is the blood's anticlotting constituent first isolated by a former District physician, Dr. Jay McLean at Johns Hopkins University in 1916. More recently prepared from cattle livers and lungs, it quickly "oils" the blood to permit it to pass obstructions such as arterial clots.

Dr. McLean, until recently District cancer control chief but now in private practice in Savannah, often has urged that doctors carry heparin for on-the-spot injections in heart attack cases. It eases true anginal pain almost as quickly as morphine, the routine pain killer, by relieving the cause instead of merely dulling the pain.

Dicumarol, initially prepared from spoiled sweet clover hay but now synthesized, is an agent which works on the blood's own clotting element. By analogy, heparin is the kerosene one puts in motor oil to keep it flowing in subzero weather; dicumarol is the filter to remove paraffin and other oil parts which solidify in extreme cold.

Dicumarol is inexpensive, but its anticlot activity is slow where speed is most needed. It takes 12 to 24 hours to go into action, probably in the liver, to stop formation of at least one of the blood constituents necessary to clotting. Thus, heparin is injected for immediate action, with dicumarol administered for prolonged therapy.

Test Is Devised

Use of dicumarol must be carefully regulated. Its thresholds of benefit and harm (internal hemorrhage) are so close that many doctors initially enthusiastic about it have discontinued its use. But at Mercy Hospital, Baltimore, doctors have devised a blood-clotting test with rabbit brains to tell them how much dicumarol they can safely prescribe.

The result is that literally hundreds of thrombotic cases, men and women who by past experiences might be dead or at least hopelessly invalided, are walking about Baltimore. Some are even back at their regular jobs. All are under continued treatment for their past heart attacks, but on an out-patient basis.

Because dicumarol must be so carefully dispensed, thrombosis specialists at this teaching hospital of the University of Maryland dole out the weekly quota of drug tablets. Even hospital physicians under dicumarol therapy can't get more than a week's supply—vacation or any other reason notwithstanding.

The heparin plus dicumarol treatment to get the patient over the first hump of the heart attack and prevent future attacks is about the hottest thing in heart drug therapy today. But it is advocated only for medical centers with specially trained laboratory technicians.

Heart Always Hit

Biggest drug boost for children with rheumatic fever came into heart clinic use during World War II. Sulfadiazine, it was found, attacks the streptococcus organism which damages the heart valves.

Rheumatic fever usually begins between the ages of 5 and 10. Its onset is preceded by infection of the germ hemolytic streptococcus, which ruptures blood cells. The same organism is the common cause of tonsillitis, scarlet fever, erysipelas, inflammation of the ear and so-called strep throat.

Rheumatic fever attacks the connective tissues of the body and causes inflammation of the muscles, valves and outer lining of the heart. It has no one characteristic symptom, but joint pain with a continuous fever are common—and hence the name.

It always affects the heart to some degree, permanently so in about two thirds of its victims. The scarring may be erosive but more generally is vegetative, that is, growth about the valves which interfere with their proper closing.

There is no medicine today specific for rheumatic fever. Bed rest is prescribed because the quieter the stricken the less heart damage results. Small doses of the sulfa drug are given daily to children shown subject to recurrent attacks to keep the blood free of the streptococci. They are administered each day through the "cold-catching" season from September to May.

Results Encouraging

Dr. T. Duckett Jones, medical director of the Helen Hay Whitney Foundation, New York, recently compiled telling statistics on the heart effects of rheumatic fever. Of 1000 cases studied 10 years after onslaught, 439 of the stricken were normally active; 209 had slight limitations; 135 had serious limitations; 203 were dead.

Another major heart condition, less dramatic in that it appears in later life, is congestive heart failure. It does not strike suddenly and in man's prime, like coronary thrombosis, but it accounts for some 30 per cent of all heart cases. It may be traced to rheumatic fever bouts in childhood; it very often follows high blood pressure of long duration.

Great medical strides have been made to ease the ills of persons with high blood pressure. It is here that digitoxin, the stable preparation of digitalis, is widely prescribed. Diets low in salt, proteins and fats are usually required for the person with congestive heart, and diuretics, mainly mercurial salts, are injected regularly to rid the body of edema (dropsy) by excretion.

Encouraging results in treatment of persons with congestive heart have come recently from Beth Israel Hospital, New York, in the work of Dr. Harry Gold, pharmacologist and cardiologist. His six-day hospital treatment followed a rigid regime at home have reportedly cut deaths from congesti e heart failure from the average of 25 per cent to 10 per cent.

More Work Necessary

After leaving the hospital, his patients resume normal activity, but must take a digitoxin pill daily to strengthen the heart muscles, eat a salt-free diet, and take regular intramuscular injections of a mercuric drug to keep the body clear of fluid accumulations.

Congestive heart failure is not a disease in itself, but is the terminal result of many causes. It becomes evident with shortness of breath, swellings of the ankles, the legs and the abdomen. As the heart is progressively affected, it must labor harder. It enlarges to meet the extra load, and by that enlargement further weakens itself.

Eventually, one of the two lower chambers (ventricles) of the heart fails, more commonly the left than the right, and the heart plays out.

New studies in dropsy, the fluid accumulation period which accompanies the congestive heart condition, are under way by Dr. Samuel A. Corson, physiologist, at Howard University School of Medicine here. Infusions of carefully compounded neutral salts quickly eliminate the accumulations.

But there still is much more work to be done, more basic studies concluded, before the treatment may be ready for clinical application.

Other heart conditions challenge the medical profession. Some are resisting; others are yielding.

Quantities Too Small

Subacute bacterial endocarditis, or the inflamation which develops from the so-called green streptococcus attacking the heart's lining, was about 97 per cent fatal at the end of World War II. Today, thanks to masive doses of penicillin, the cure rate has risen to as high as 75 per cent in many series. The new antibiotics, too, are hitting another scourge of the heart, syphilis.

Most promising treatments for possible use in the future are seen in cortisone and ACTH, the new hormone drugs which have shown themselves so dramatically effective against rheumatoid arthritis, and the atomic age use of radioactive iodine for anginal pains.

But cortisone and ACTH are obtainable in quantities too small even for research needed to study their mechanics. And radioactive iodine therapy has not been under study long enough to appraise its long-run worth.

Thieves Get $300 Haul In County Crime Wave

Prince Frederick, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—Thieves got $300 from a country store over the weekend, the largest haul yet in a wave of burglaries that has Calvert County on edge.

Entry was made by climbing atop the porch of Brooke Bond's store at Port Republic and breaking through a window. It was the eighth burglary in the county in 10 days.

Virginia Nets 18% on Year's Liquor Sales

By S. Oliver Goodman

Virginia, which operates a State liquor monopoly system, made a net profit of $17,640,600 or 18 per cent on sales of $90,807,000 in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1948.

The Census Bureau, reporting this yesterday, added that the Old Dominion ranked third in profit among the 16 States with monopoly systems.

Net of the 16 States amounted to $167,343,000, or 19½ per cent on aggregate sales of $852,561,000, the Census Bureau said.

Pennsylvania, with sales of $189,368,000, made the largest profit, $38,205,000. Michigan was second with sales of $129,658,000 and net profit of $29,153,000.

Ohio with sales of $129,170,000 ranked ahead of Virginia in that respect, but its net profit of $16,870,000 trailed behind Virginia's.

	Net Sales	Net Income
Alabama	$48,991,000	$13,484,000
West Virginia	45,236,000	9,657,000
Oregon	41,185,000	9,273,000

Wyoming	6,302,000	535,000
Vermont	6,409,000	162,000

The District of Columbia, which has a private license system, showed a net income of $3,077,574 in the 12 months ended December 31, 1948, according to the Distilled Spirits Institute. Total revenues from license fees and liquor excise taxes amounted to $3,158,836 in 1948, while costs of administration were $81,262.

HEARTENING: Yesterday's spirited rise in stock prices was attributed to Washington developments. Thomas B. McCabe, chairman of the Federal Reserve, made a statement to Congress that rang a cheerful note in Wall Street ears. He said taxes, especially in higher brackets, should be reduced to make more money available for the purchase of common stocks to provide business capital. His statement and the Federal Reserve cut of reserve requirements for banks was hailed by one large Wall Street firm as "further proof of the Administration's desire to keep the economy on a high level." The firm added: "The beginning of a new spirit can be sensed in Wall Street. This could easily be the foundation for the next major expansion in American business activity."

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ralph E. White, former national director of records and microphotography for Federal Works Agencies, has been appointed manager of the microfilm division of Diebold, Inc. . . . Alfred E. Lampe of Bethesda, Md., has been awarded the designation of Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter (C.P.C.U.) . . . White Ernest F. Mallinger has been named chief flight engineer of National Airlines . . . Semon E. Knudson, son of the late William S. Knudsen, former General Motors president, has been elevated to director of GM process development .

COMPARISONS: Washington's 27 savings and loan associations have combined assets exceeding Maryland's 374 associations, figures as of June 30 reveal. The members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League showed resources of $354,767,602, against $310,746,435 for members of the Maryland league. The local institutions gained about eight million dollars for the 12 months ended June 30, while the Maryland group displayed an increase of two million in resources.

Inquests Clear Slaying Suspect Hold Another for Grand Jury

One man was ordered held for the grand jury and another cleared at coroner's inquests yesterday into two weekend deaths.

Sylvester Kitrell, 25, of 225 D st. nw., was held as a suspect in the fatal stabbing of James E. Patterson, 27, of 456 Massachusetts ave. nw. Patterson died in Casualty Hospital several hours after he was stabbed in the forehead with an ice pick Saturday night during an argument over a woman.

John Henry Johnson, 33, of 635 L st. nw., was cleared in the death of James Mack, 33, who lived in the rear of 1111 7th st. nw.

The latter died Sunday in Freedmen's Hospital of a fractured skull suffered Saturday when he fell from a second-story window at his home during a party.

Johnson told police that Mack lunged at him with a knife when the former turned down a demand for money to buy whisky. Johnson said he sidestepped and Mack, propelled by his own weight, lurched out of the window. The coroner's jury ruled the death was accidental.

Commissioners to Hear Appeal on ABC Ruling

District Commissioners will hold a closed hearing September 6 on an appeal by Brinkley's, a restaurant at 533 8th st. se., from an Alcoholic Beverage Control Board decision revoking the liquor license there.

The ABC board found that the restaurant's chief source of revenue is from the sale sale of alcoholic beverages and not from the sale of food as the liquor laws require.

PEPCO Seeks Merger With Alexandria Utility

District Public Utilities Commission will hold a hearing at 10 a. m. on August 23 on an application by the Potomac Electric Light & Power Co., Inc., Alexandria, Va.

Pepco, in its application for approval of the merger, contended that such unification would permit economies of operation. If approved, the firm will be subject to control of the District PUC and the Virginia State Corporation Commission.

4-H Group Opens 27th Annual Week At Maryland U.

More than 1000 4-H boys and girls moved into the University of Maryland yesterday for the beginning of the week-long twenty-seventh annual State Club Week.

The youths, 12 to 21 years, were divided into two Indian nations, the Iroquois and the Algonquins, and then further subdivided into 12 tribes.

One of the events to which the girl members are looking forward is the State dress preview Friday in which the country lasses will model their own creations. The winners will go to the National 4-H review in Chicago in December.

Other events of interest include a farm fire prevention demonstration Friday morning in which Chief James W. Just, director of the Fire Extension Service of the University of Maryland, will demonstrate latest methods of safe fire handling.

Friday night will see the traditional candle light tapping ceremonies for the All Star Consecration Service. This is one of the highlights of the gathering.

Yesterday, most of the delegates spent in registering.

Britain, U. S. Discuss Cable, Radio Rate Cuts

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—American and British Commonwealth delegations began talks here today on possible changes in overseas cable and radio rates.

The United States Government sent Wayne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, to head its delegation.

A brief announcement from the British general postoffice said the United States asked for a review of present prices, which were set up at a conference in Bermuda in 1945, "in view of changing conditions today."

Widow Strangled In Baltimore Home

Baltimore, Aug. 8 (AP).—The trussed body of a 55-year-old widow was found in her East Baltimore apartment today.

Police said she had been strangled with an electric light cord.

She was identified as Mrs. Emma A. Kefalos, who had lived alone in a second-floor apartment in the 2000 block of Fleet st. in Baltimore's Polish-Bohemian section.

The apartment had been ransacked. Nick Dritsas, who conducts a restaurant in the same block, said neighbors had last seen her this morning.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, August 8 (AP).—Grains sank while soybeans and lard moved higher on the board of trade today.

During the early part of the session grains also showed some firmness. May opening at a new seasonal high and moving up further in early dealings. But grains stalled around midway in the session and during the latter part they moved definitely downward.

Wheat closed ⅛-1¼ lower, corn was ¼-1¼ lower, oats were ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher, rye was ¼ to 1 cent lower, soybeans were 1½ to 2 cents higher, and lard was 2 to 20 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Casey Stengel Hints 'Sore' Brownies Hit Yankees on Purpose

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—New York Yankee players and Manager Casey Stengel are peeved at two former mates—Karl Drews and Dick Starr of St. Louis. The Brownie hurlers hit four Yankees with wild-pitched balls yesterday, and one—catcher Yogi Berra—will be sidelined for three weeks with a thumb fracture.

"Our players did not like that sort of thing," Stengel was quoted as saying, "with four men hit—one by Dick Starr and three by Karl Drews, both former Yankees it looked bad. You can't read a guy's thoughts or intentions, but after a sequence of happenings like that, one is tempted to draw certain conclusions.

Stengel

"The Brownies were sore at having been belted around so much here. Some of their pitchers must have taken it upon themselves to loosen up our guys at the plate. And they sure loosened one of our vital rivets in making Berra a fracture case.

"I would rather have lost the game than have Berra and Tommy Henrich hurt. Berra's thumb could be a real crippler to our chances. However, we have been up against accidents all season, and the boys may rebound as usual.

"I'VE SELDOM seen a pitcher as careless as that Drews. He hit Jerry Coleman and then Henrich and Gus Niarhos. Niarhos' plunk was one in the back that hurt, though it wasn't as serious as the wallop Henrich took.

"Those two Brown pitchers were not good enough to hang on with the Yankees and they haven't been good enough with the Browns to keep from getting banged around. Our fellows came to the conclusion they got sore about it and tried unclubby stuff in retaliation."

Berra was hit by Starr, making his first appearance since undergoing an appendectomy June 12.

A Yankee spokesman said tonight that Henrich will not start the big series with the Red Sox in Boston, but might rejoin the team there before the series ends.

Henrich was hit on the elbow by one of Drews' offerings. The joint was so stiff today it could not be bent.

All four players were hit in the first game of yesterday's doubleheader, won by the Yankees 20-2.

MEANWHILE, vengeance and victory was the battle-cry of the Boston Red Sox today as they placed an inviting welcome mat in front of Fenway Park and prepared to pull it out from under the pace-setting New York Yankees tomorrow.

Although 6½ games separate the third-place Red Sox from the Yankees, Boston Boss Joe McCarthy believes his club will be set for a pennant-winning drive if it can take the series from New York.

The Red Sox need no urging. All they need do is recall the last Yankee series in Boston.

That was the series that began on June 28 when Allie Reynolds beat their rookie southpaw star, Maurice McDermott, 5 to 4. On the following day, the Yankees made it two straight with a 9-to-7 triumph, coming from behind in the late innings.

AND JUST to rub salt in Boston's wound, rangy Vic Raschi beat southpaw Mel Parnell, 6 to 3, on the third day.

Even if the Red Sox could forget those three straight beatings in Boston, they still remember invading Yankee Stadium on July 4 and dropping two out of three.

McCarthy's charges currently stack up as one of the hottest clubs in baseball, having won seven of their last eight games.

Another interesting side-light on the series will center around whether Yanke pitchers can halt the red-hot hitting streak of Dom DiMaggio, who has hit safely in 34 successive games. His big brother, Joe, holds the major league record of hitting safely in 56 consecutive games.

'Ez' vs. Gus Just Another Fight—Eagan

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The news from Britain that Bruce Woodcock doesn't choose to fight Lee Savold brought a brief spell of jubilation to the offices of the International Boxing Club here today.

It dawned suddenly on Harry Markson, managing director of the benevolent monopoly, that abandonment of the London bout would automatically turn Wednesday night's struggle at Yankee Stadium between Ezzard Charles and Gus Lesnevich into a fight for the world heavyweight championship of everywhere, including New York.

Quickly he got in touch with Chairman Eddie Eagan of the New York commission to see if that wasn't right, and several hours later, after the commissioner had engaged in mature thought, learned that no, it wasn't.

So far as this State is concerned, Eagan said, Wednesday's 15-round contest still will be just an elimination. The winner, he said, will be recognized as heavyweight champion in New York only after he has whipped Savold or some other ranking contender.

Meanwhile, in Doncaster, England, Woodcock, British heavyweight boxing champ, was wheeled out of a hospital with his left arm in a sling to announce he may quit boxing.

"I am seriously thinking about packing in the game," said the 28-year-old titleholder, who was to have fought Lee Savold next month for the British version of the world heavyweight crown.

"I'm all in," he said. "I am pretty certain that the fight with Savold will not take place."

All-Star Teams Meet Tonight

Bogley, Other Area Tennis Players Lose

Newport, R. I., Aug. 8.—All of the District of Columbia area representatives competing in the Newport Casino Invitational Tennis tournament went down to defeat in the first day of play.

Buddy Behrens, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., ousted Casper Nannes, Washington, 6—2, 6—4, and Charles DeVee, Indianapolis, Ind., eliminated Hal Burrows, jr., Charlottesville, Va., 6—3, 9—7 in first round play.

The only District netman to win a first round match was Capt. Robin Hippenstiel who downed Chauncey Steele, Cambridge, Mass., 5—7, 6—2. Hippenstiel, however, was defeated in the second round of play in the afternoon by Straight Clark, Pasadena, Calif., 6—4, 6—3.

Comdr. Charles Jones, Cumberland, Md., Jim Thackera, Washington, D. C., and Gil Bogley, Chevy Chase, Md., all drew byes in the first round of play but failed to pass their afternoon tests.

Jones lost to Charles Harris, Corpus Christi, Tex., 6—1, 6—1; Thackera went down before Sidney Schwartz, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Bogley, national junior champ, lost to Don Lowenbein, San Francisco, 6—2, 9—7.

Richard (Pancho) Gonzales, National Singles champion from Los Angeles, was forced to 34 taut games before downing Richard Mouledous, third ranking junior from New Orleans.

Gonzales, seeded first, drew a first round bye and then received a stiff battle from Mouledous. Gonzales won by scores of 13-11 and 6—4.

Mangrum's 204 Retains Lead; Snead Peeved at 74

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Slammin' Sammy Snead collapsed for a two-over-par 74 as pace-setter Lloyd Mangrum plodded along with a second straight 70 and a 54-hole lead of four strokes in the $20,000 All-American Professional Golf Tourney today.

Mangrum's 64, 70, 70 gave him a three quarter total of 204, 12 under par.

Snead, who started the third 18-hole round only one stroke behind Mangrum, 134 to 135, putted miserably and generally was in hot water as he carded his poorest round for a 54-hole aggregate of 209.

Tied With Two Others

That left leading money winner Snead deadlocked with two other players in fifth spot behind a triumvirate knotted at 208, including Clayton Heafner, Bill Nary and Fred Haas, jr.

Also bracketed with Snead at 209 were Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., who with Nary had the day's best round, five-under-par 67's, and Herman Barron, All-American winner in 1946.

It generally was a poor-playing day on Tam O'Shanter's well-trampled fairways and greens, but the biggest disappointment was Snead's blow-up after rounds of 67 and 68.

Snead slammed down his pencil after marking up his 36-38 score over Tam's par 36-36—72, 6925-yard span, and angrily strode to the locker-room. There was no gay throwing of his ball to the gallery, as he did after the first two rounds.

Sizzling Round Needed

The day's proceedings left it up to Defending Champion Mangrum to cakewalk into the $3333 first prize, unless one of the Heafner-Nary-Haas trio can uncork a sizzling round in tomorrow's final 18-hole chase.

Standing alone at 210, six strokes off the pace, was Jimmy Demaret, who has belted three straight 70 rounds. The traffic was congested at 211 where nine players were bracketed, including Henry Ransom, Herman Keiser, Jerry Barber, Johnny Bulla, Pete Cooper, Toney Penna, Harry Todd, Jim Ferrier and Ed (Porky) Oliver.

After that the 100-player field was strung far behind, with National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff spotted at 214, after an even par 72 following a pair of 71s.

Snead's blow-up was concentrated in the back nine where, from the twelfth through the fifteenth holes, he went four strokes over par. He three-putted the par 4 twelfth for a five, took a 2-over-par 6 on the thirteenth where it took him four to get on and two putts, and got trapped on the fourteenth for a one-over-par 5.

Best Nine-Hole Round

Nary had the best nine-hole round on the sun-broiled Tam course, his home trip of 31, which included two eagles.

In all, 28 players were below par 216 for the 54-hole distance.

The pro field had three major withdrawals. Bob Hamilton, who had an opening 34, two under par, picked up on the fifteenth hole after two straight two-over pars. Dutch Harrison failed to start today because of an ailing leg. Dick Metz also quit after a 36-hole total of 151, seven over par.

Third round festivities in the concurrent All-American amateur found the early leader, Julius Boros of West Hartford, Conn., skidding into coleadership with John (Pick) Wagner of Chicago.

Boros, after shooting 67 and 69, blew to a six-over-par 78 today for a 54-hole total of 214 which Wagner also reached with a 70. Third, a stroke behind, was Al Besselink of Chicago whose 73 gave him 215.

The field in the 25-player All-American women's open straggled home around dusk with pro Louise Suggs of Carrollton, Ga., posting a 77 for a 54-hole total of 227, five strokes in front.

Defending Champion Babe Zaharias, Denver pro, turned in the day's best round, two-under-par 74 for a three-quarter total of 232, the runner-up spot which Babe shared with pro Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex.

Newcombe Wins 11th; Pollet Registers 15th

Slaughter's Two Homers Pace Rout of Cincy

St. Louis, Aug. 8 (AP).—Enos Slaughter walloped two home runs and drove in six runs as the high-flying St. Louis Redbirds overpowered the Cincinnati Reds tonight, 9 to 3. Howard Pollet coasted to his 15th victory as the Birds maintained their first-place tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers, who won from the New York Giants.

A crowd of 13,000, one of the smallest night turnouts of the season, saw the Cards take full advantage of the wildness of Cincinnati pitchers, Kent Peterson and Ken Burkhart. The Redlanders outhit the Cards, 12 to 5.

Four Straight Walks

Slaughter's first homer came in the third inning and scored Nippy Jones. In the next frame four straight walks forced one run across and left the bases loaded. Enos promptly unloaded them with his second four-master and his tenth of the season. Burkhart, former card pitcher, relieved Peterson in time to issue one pass and take the rap on Slaughter's big blow.

Red Schoendienst walked in the first and reached second when Virg Stallcup dropped Bobby Adams' toss on Stan Musial's grounder. Jones' single brought Schoendienst in.

Chuck Diering tripled against the right field screen in the second, scoring Tommy Glaviano who had been hit by a pitched ball.

Walker Cooper, Red Catcher and former battery mate of Pollet's, drove in all three Cincinnati runs. Pollet was something less than a puzzle to the Reds, but only Cooper could find the range with runners in scoring position.

Pollet Halts Rally

The Reds scored in the fourth on Grady Hatton's double and Cooper's single. Danny Litwhiler doubled big Coop to third, but Pollet tightened and fanned Ted Kluszewski and retired Adams on a grounder.

The Redlanders added two more in the fifth on singles by Harry Walker and Hatton and Cooper's long double. They loaded the bases with none out in the eighth, but Pollet stopped them cold.

Robinson Hits 4-Bagger; Gift Run Decisive

Brooklyn, Aug. 8 (AP).—Big Don Newcombe pitched Brooklyn to a 2-1 victory over Dave Koslo and the New York Giants tonight as the Dodgers sought to sanp their first-place tie with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Koslo walked in the winning run in the eighth after Jackie Robinson had homered in the second inning. The Cards engaged the Cincinnati Reds in St. Louis.

A crowd of 33,826 saw Newcombe register his eleventh triumph with a neat four-hitter. The big righthander, who has lost only three this season, had a shutout until, the ninth when Whitey Lockman struck him for his eighth home run of the campaign.

Three Up—Three Down

Newcombe retired the next three men in order to preserve his victory. He got Bobby Thomson and Johnny Mize on strikes and forced Willard Marshall to send an easy game-ending fly to Carl Furillo in right.

Koslo also pitched a fine game, but was unfortunate in serving a home run pitch to Robinson in the second. It was the 13th round tripper for the Dodger second baseman. It was the first of seven Brooklyn hits off the crafty lefthander.

The Dodgers got what proved to be the winning run in the eighth. With two out, Furillo singled and moved to second on another single by Robinson. When Lockman fumbled the hit, the runners advanced. This set the stage for an intentional pass to Gil Hodges, to load the bases.

Bruce Edwards batted for the lefthanded-hitting Duke Snider and drew another walk to force in Furillo.

It was Newcombe's fourth straight and his first over the Giants. It was also Koslo's first loss to Brooklyn, and his sixth against seven victories.

Ever Hear of Football 'Widow? Ask Wife of Redskin Coach!

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 8.—Mrs. Marion Whelchel, personable wife of the Washington Redskins new head coach, is an understanding sort of person. Otherwise her trip to California would be a total flop.

In one week here, Mrs. Whelchel has seen her husband less than at any time during their three years of marriage, except when he was afloat on duty with the Navy.

"And all he ever talks about is football," she confides. "It's always been that way, but now it's worse. He always gets a sort of far-away look in his eyes in the fall and I know he's thinking about football."

The Whelchels' first Sunday in California was hardly a day off from football.

"We attended a birthday dinner for the admiral's brother in Long Beach," said Mrs. Whelchel, "and hardly sat down before we had to rush back to afternoon practice. We were 20 minutes late returning and you'd have thought it was going to spoil the Redskins' whole season. The admiral was thinking about fining himself a dollar a minute for being late."—BILL BURNETT.

Freak News From All Over

Hot Potato Baffles Umpire!

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 8 (AP).—Here's one for the anything-can-happen-in-baseball department:

With a runner on third in a City League game yesterday, the defensive catcher pulled a potato out of his hip pocket and threw it to third. The third baseman fumbled it and the runner broke for home. He was tagged by the catcher, who was holding the ball all the time.

The plate umpire was confused, too, for a while. He called the runner out, then reversed the decision, allowing the runner to score.

Wins in a Walk

Birmingham, Eng., Aug. 8 (AP).—Race fans bronx-cheered the winner and the loser today after a slow-motion mile and five furlong horse race that took more than five minutes.

Neither 2-5 favorite Ridge Wood nor his opponent, Courier, stirred when the race, the Midland St. Leger Trial Stakes, started.

It was a two-horse race and the customers yelled for action.

The starter's assistant moved behind the horses with his long whip. They began to move—at a walk.

Still walking, Ridgewood and Courier covered the first furlong in one minute, 24 seconds. A man can run that distance—220 yards— in 20.3 seconds.

The horses walked the first six furlongs while the fans booed. The horses broke into a run at the six-furlong mark and Ridgewood won by three lengths.

The trainers admitted that each jockey had orders to wait until the other set the pace.

The winner's time: 5:13 4-5. The world record: 2:40 4-5.

$2407 'Double' at Dade

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 8 (AP).—Calladico and Liberate combined today for a $2,407.20 Daily Double on the first two races at Dade Park.

Calladico took the first, a $900 claiming race at 6 furlongs, and paid $55, $42.20 and $15.20 across the board. Liberate triumphed in the second, also a $900 claiming event at 6 furlongs, rewarded his backers with $14.40, $10.20 and $5.20.

Twin Injuries for Twins

Zion National Park, Utah, Aug. 8. (AP).—Fred and Ferd Neilson are 18-year-old identical twins from Washington, Utah. Both are employed at Zion National Park.

On June 29, Fred broke his left leg playing softball for the Utah Parks Co. team, sliding into third base in a game at Cedar City. The bone broken was the left fibula. Fred was the first man to bat and hit the first pitched ball in the first inning. He took his cast off today.

On July 19, Ferd broke his left leg playing softball for the same team. He did it in sliding into third base in a game at Cedar City. The bone broken was the left fibula, at a spot about 3 inches below that of Fred's break. Ferd was the third man up and hit the third ball pitched in the third inning.

Two No-Hitters in 8 Days

Lebanon, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—Dick Umberger, righthander with the Lebanon Chicks in the Class D North Atlantic League, hurled his second no-hitter in eight days when he downed Hazleton 5-0 in the seven-inning second game of a twin bill yesterday.

Too Slow

Harry Gilmer's Not Looking Good in Redskins' 'T' Slot

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 8.—The first cool weather of their training grind greeted the Washington Redskins today, Head Coach Billick Whelchel could see no marked improvement in the squad as a result . . . "They're slow," Whelchel worried as he supervised the usual two-a-day workouts . . .

Sidelined were Halfback Dan Sandifer and Quarterback Bob Hainlen with pulled leg muscles but Halfback Eddie Saenz was back in uniform . . . this despite his date for a tonsilectomy tomorrow . . . asked if the T-formation was becoming more familiar to him, Harry Gilmer had a counter question . . . "Hadn't you noticed?" . . . the fact is, Gilmer's passing has been very rough and coaches are worried about his slowness in getting out of the quarterback "slot" . . . he fakes beautifully but has nothing on Baugh, now showing his best form in that department . . . in deference to Whelchel's's long Navy service, the 'Skins now call it "Liberty until 2300" instead of a night off with lights out at 11 o'clock.

Slingin' Sam Baugh has a new gin rummy opponent to take the place of Dick Todd . . . Baugh's understudy, Harry Gilmer, is the "victim' who's leading by a nice margin of 3678 to 3489 . . . The score, kept from one day to the next, will probably be in the millions before the end of the season.

Rookie Jack Kirby's greatest admirer spoke to him and failed to get an answer . . . The reason: Kirby was off on a 75-yard touchdown run in scrimmage when his 4-year-old son screamed, "Hi daddy," from the sidelines . . . Redskin Chief Herman Ball will fly to the All-Star game in Chicago and escort the Skins' three stars—Bob Goode, Len Szafaryn and Laurie Niemi—back to camp . . . Incidentally Ball will take notes on Mr. Steve Van Burean and Co., hoping to find some way of stopping the Philadelphia Eagles in 1949 league games.

Weik Faces Athletics

Nats Out Tonight to Boost 'Streak' to 2 Straight Games

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Something they haven't done in two months—win two straight games—is the Nats' goal tonight as they launch a two-game series with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Not since June 3, when they swept a three-game series from the Browns, have the Nats tacked on one victory after another.

Now, however, things are different, the club feels. With Lloyd Hittle snapping the latest losing streak at seven straight with a nifty 1-0 success against the White Sox Sunday, the Nats are sending Dick Weik out after the resurging Athletics this evening.

Since being promoted to the varsity two weeks ago, Weik hasn't won a game, but the manner in which he lost both his starts is indeed encouraging. The right-hander from Iowa's tall corn country lost his first start to the Browns in 10 innings after hurling two-hit, shutout ball for 8⅔ innings. In his next appearance, it took the Cleveland Indians 12 innings to conk him.

Except for two exhibition jobs, his only previous start was against these same Athletics and you can't blame the 22-year-old speedballer if he doesn't want to be reminded of that appearance. He walked the first three As he faced on July 4 and the fourth one, Sam Chapman, slapped a home run. Weik lasted three more innings retiring on the short end of a 6-0 score.

But Weik's a different pitcher now. He's learned control, the only thing that kept him off the varsity until recently. He's had good stuff—a fast ball that jumps and a curve that explodes all along, but he couldn't find the plate. He had to let up to avoid wildness and when he did the opposition plastered him.

But the Nats and Weik feel he's ready now. Certainly, they hope so because pitching is the Nats sorest need. They've averaged over three runs a game during these losing days, but their pitchers have averaged far more and the result has been one losing streak after another, 25 out of 30 since July 4 to exact.

Mulbry Denies Pension Plan Peril; Age Change Proposed

Cincinnati, Aug. 8 (AP).—The major league player pension and insurance plan is not in jeopardy, Walter Mulbry, its secretary-treasurer, said today.

However, a proposal to make the age minimum 55 years instead of 50 before the annuities begin, is under consideration, he added.

That matter will be discussed at a meeting of the baseball executive council in Chicago next Thursday, Mulbry said.

Mulbry, who also is secretary of baseball, told a reporter today that reports of the fund being on the verge of collapse are without foundation.

There are only three or four men eligible at this time to collect from the fund, Mulbry said. The others, he added, will not begin tapping the till until 1952.

By that time, players and clubs will have paid more than $2,750,000 into the fund, according to the secretary-treasurer.

"Statements that the plan is in jeopardy are regrettable," Mulbry said. "The program is going along as forecast at its inception early in 1947."

The insurance and annuity plan began in 1947. It provides that players with five years' major league experience shall receive $50 a month for life. Men who have played in the big leagues for 10 years or more will get $100 a month.

At the start, the players who entered the plan paid $250. Each man now pays from 27 cents to $2.70 per playing day—depending on the length of service—as his share of the cost.

The 16 club owners in the American and National Leagues, however, will pay 75 per cent of the cost of the plan over the long haul, Mulbry said.

Shirley May Sees Channel Swimmer Rescued

Dover, England, Aug. 8 (AP).—Shirley May France, 16-year-old Somerset, Mass. swimmer, who will attempt to conquer the English Channel, saw the rescue yesterday of a tough British Army gunner who had floundered 50 yards out in Dover Harbor.

She was standing on the beach with two other Channel aspirants, Mrs. Kroes van Rijsel, Dutch housewife, and Philip Mickman, English schoolboy, when the gunner, Albert Fairclough, called for help.

He had developed a cramp in his shoulder and was being carried away by the tide when Edward Temme, trainer for the Dutch and British swimmers, jumped in a taxi-boat and sped to the stricken Fairclough.

In Atlantic

Naval Gun Anglers Land Bass, Dolphin

By Ralph Murdock

Angling reports of Washingtonians who fish on the Atlantic continue to trickle in. Four Naval Gun Factory employes have just returned from Lewes, Del., where they enjoyed a successful trip with Capt. Harry M. Parsons on the "Thelma Dale."

Murdock

They are R. L. Vaughn, A. F. Schockley, F. N. Kidwell and H. G. Bucklee from the "Yard" and a brother of the latter angler, E. J. Bucklee from Mattoon, Ill. They boated 150 sea bass that ranged from 2 to 4 pounds, and 36 dolphin that averaged three pounds. For bait they used fresh squid and clam.

Reports emanating from New Jersey to North Carolina show unusually large catches of flounder, some weighing up to 6 pounds. An oversized one, weighing 14¾ pounds, was dragged in by Val Zimmerman of Newark, N. J.

Paul Kreh, of the District, with a party of local anglers, succeeded in landing 72 of the so-called "door-mats." Only a few strays have been pick up in the bay area to date.

TWO TROLLING parties left Capt. Leon Langley's pier at the same time—6 a. m. The first party with Doc Ayres, E. L. Fowler, Clarence Cook and Paul Atcheson drew a complete blank by failing to catch a fish of any description. They returned at 12:30. The second party, consisting of R. D. Graham and three friends, stuck it out two hours longer and ended up with a nice catch of 75 fish. The icebox showed 40 blues, 10 trout, eight rockfish, and 17 spot. All of the spot were taken with bloodworms and cut spot while trolling produced the balance of the catch.

Just 15 miles farther down the bay, a party of three anglers made the largest haul of blues and trout in this area. Again, the father-and-son combination worked to perfection. Jerry D'Andelet and his son, Jerry, jr., with Callan Duffy completing the crew, landed a total of 400 blues and trout. The count showed 280 blues which averaged 1¼4 pounds each and 120 trout, the largest of which scaled 2½ pounds. They trolled 1½ miles off St. Jerome's Creek with Tony Acetta Pet spoons.

CALLAN DUFFY SAID, "The fish came up at 11 a.m., and stayed up until 3 p.m. I have never seen fish hit so fast and furious. We started with nylon leaders and would have lost all of our tackle if we had not switched to wire leaders. The blues soon cut the feathers from the spoons but they kept right on biting just the same."

Duffy concluded with this, "There were eight boats including several outboards that were in the fish. Most of them had good catches. It was my best fishing trip. It seems that one good trip makes up for a lot of bad ones."

The boat was privately owned by Jerry D'Andelet.

McCreary Boots Halt In by Length

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—Greentree Stable's Capot, the Belmont-Preakness winner, again proved a distinct disappointment when he could finish no better than third in the Amsterdam Handicap, an overnight event of $4,000 added which featured the opening of the second full week of competition at this ancient course today.

Woodvale Farm's Halt negleted in the betting came from last place under one of Conn McCreary's typical "coolish" rides to swoop home winner by a length over Mrs. Akel Wichfeld's Daiquari, returning $30.50, $10.30 and $3.60 across the line.

Capot, under top weight of 126 pounds, was six more lengths behind the runner-up, while Clifford Moore's Belin barely saved the show from George D. Widener's Marabout. Last to finish was Crispin Oglebay's Noble Impulse.

Capot, odds-on at 4 to 5, made his first start since finishing fifth in the mile and a quarter Arlington Classic in Chicago on July 30. It is likely that his speed was dulled by that midwest distance event. At any rate, he lacked zip and sparkle. Surely, his claim to the three-year-old championship was further lessened by reason of his poor performance today.

Halt's score was a complete surprise to the majority in the crowd of 11,238, only 40 less than for the corresponding day a year ago. He had been outrun in his last five starts. He had not won, as a matter of fact, since taking the Blue Grass at Keeneland back in April. His triumph continued, however, the success of Woodvale farms, owned by Royce G. Martin, which last week finished one, two in the test stakes.

The Amsterdam was a public prep for the historic Travers of one mile and a quarter on Saturday. Capot, Belin and Daiquari are eligible to start. Withdrawn from today's feature were Brick and Wine List, stablemates of Capot, Galloping Gus and Vital Sun.

Capital Transit, Philco Play in Series Opener

The double elimination series to determine the top unlimited amateur baseball team in Washington starts Wednesday. Philco and the Capital Transit champs meet on the South Ellipse at 4:30 p. m.

Thursday, Heurich and the Fire Department teams meet; with the Police Department tangling with the Marine Corps Institute nine on Friday. The seventh team entered in the series, North East Body Works, drew a first round bye and will meet the winner of the Wednesday game on August 15.

The final District champs will play host to the All-American Amateur Baseball hampionships here opening with a game between the local team and last year's champs from Spring Grove, Pa., in Griffith Stadium on September 6.

Johnson League Title Series Will Open Tomorrow

Four undefeated squads clash on the East Ellipse tomorrow when Takoma's 12 and under and 14 and under, teams meet the Rosedale 12- and 14-year-old teams in the first game of a two of three series for the championship of their sections in the Walter Johnson League.

At 11 a. m. the 12 and under teams meet and the 14-year-olds tangle at 1 p. m.

The winners of the series, which will continue in Griffith Stadium Friday and Saturday, will receive 15 gold baseballs and the losers will get the usual losers' prize—nothing.

Hardesty's Wins, 5-3

Hardesty's Market defeated American Legion Post No. 139, 5-3, in a National City Junior League game yesterday on the Ellipse. Don Brumleve and Pete Settle paced the winners' attack with two hits apiece.

Browns Sign 3 Area Stars

St. Louis Browns' Scout Rex Greaves signed three area sandlot ballplayers to Brownie contracts yesterday.

Rufus Crawford, slugging outfielder-infielder for the Cameo Furniture Co. team in the Washing Post Industrial League, will report to St. Louis Wednesday en route to Wichita Falls, Tex., in the Class B Big State League.

Signed to 1950 contracts with the Ada, Okla., club in the Class D Sooner State League were Gene Junta, 19-year-old outfielder, and 17-year-old Sammy Craun, a right-handed pitcher.

Junta hit .350 in 19 games with the Maryland Dodgers in the Prince Georges Unlimited League, and Craun hurled for the Marshall, Va., club in the Blue Ridge Sunday League.

All three prospects worked out in Griffith Stadium under the surveillance of Greaves and Manager Zach Taylor during St. Louis' various engagements here.

St. Louis will conduct two tryout camps this month from the eleventh to thirteenth and on the eighteenth and nineteth at Mays Landing, N. J., and at Somerville, N. J., respectively, with hopes of spotting some promising material

CHAMPEER is a champagne-like Sparkling Malt Liquor

CHAMPEER is in a class by itself

Smart . . Yes. You'll find Champeer served in the better hotels, night clubs, restaurants, private clubs, and fine cocktail lounges.

Champagne-like . . Yes. Champeer is a sparkling malt liquor—it is zesty and exciting to the taste—a bit of continental atmosphere—delicious and superbly different.

Expensive . . Yes, when compared with the cost of beer. NO, when compared with a high-ball. INEXPENSIVE, when compared with good champagne.

CHAMPEER is America's New Taste Thrill . . .

The Story of Champeer as it appears on the label: Christian Heurich was a brewer for more than 80 years. He lived to be over 102 (1842 to 1945). For very special occasions he would delight in serving a private malt liquor, which he affectionately called his Champagne Beer (hence the name CHAMPEER). It is with great pride that we offer this superbly different brew to discriminating people the world over.

A product of the only brewery located in Washington, D. C., the seat of the greatest Capital in the world. This superbly different brew is produced by one of the oldest and most skilled breweries in America.

WHOLESALERS: A few choice territories are still available for this sensational product. It is unique and will not compete with any product you may be handling. Because North Carolina and Georgia prohibit the sale of Malt Liquor over 6% alcohol by volume, this product can not be offered for sale in these States.

subcommittee did approve longevity promotions for classified employes in dead-end job. Employes would be limited to three such in-grade promotions after they reached the top of their respective grades, one every three years. The Murray bill also would:

Give the 100,000 employes in the crafts, protective, and custodial service an average pay boost of about $125;

Transfer the clerical-mechanical service to the Treasury wage board which would fix the salaries of the 3800 employes in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing;

Allow any classified employe to appeal his job classification to the Civil Service Commission;

Repeal the present salary-fixing Classification Act, and,

Define each of the proposed new 18 grades and the Civil Service Commission would have to use the definitions as a guide in classifying jobs. The Senate bill carries no similar provision.

Main Points of Difference

The main differences in proposed salaries under the two bills are in the first eight grades, which do not correspond to present grades. No changes were made in the original Murray bill in new grade 9 through the $15,000 grade 17. The Senate bill has 15 grades, but in middle and top salaries it closely resembles the Murray bill.

The following table shows present classified pay rates and new rates proposed in both the Senate and House bills:

STRATEGY: Meantime, there there was a new strategy maneuver at speeding up House action on the Corbett plan to give a flat $150 pay boost and other benefits to the 500,000 postal employes.

Representative Corbett, (R., Pa.) introduced a special resolution which, in effect, asked the House Rules Committee to clear the postal pay bill for House action. He will file a petition to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill unless it takes favorable action within seven days.

Five Groups Ask Orme Be Kept as Police Chief

Rockville Council, Allied Civic Group Of Silver Spring, VFW Join in Plea

Reinstatement of Charles M. Orme, suspended chief of Montgomery County Police, drew support yesterday on three fronts.

1. The Rockville Town Council, in a special meeting, not only asked the County Council to retain Orme as chief but also asked it to "define his powers and policies so the he may function without duress."

2. The Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring demanded that the council at a meeting today reinstate the official and, failing that, conduct "a fair and impartial public investigation of County Manager McNayr's charges against Chief Orme and afford the police chief an opportunity to publicly answer the charges."

3. The executive committee of the Montgomery County Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 2958 unanimously condemned what it termed "the despotic action of the county manager in suspending the chief of police."

Statement To Press

These new voices were added to the clamor which began last Friday when the chief was suspended after he had told reporters he doubted the effectiveness of the one-man police car system begun recently by the County council at McNayr's request.

Earlier protests had been voiced by the Montgomery County Policemen's Association and the Montgomery County Press Association.

McNayr said the press statement was the "immediate cause" of the suspension, but added that there are "other reasons too."

In line with the request for the lifting of the suspension, Rockville Mayor G. La Mar Kelly said the council felt Orme had "not been free to speak for himself," and that the policemen "don't know where the axe will fall next."

The Allied Civic Group's demand came as a result of a 22-11 vote during a meeting in the Liquor Control Board building in Silver Spring.

Want Order Recalled

In a second resolution, the group requested the county council to immediately recall its order requiring one-man operation of police cars and to conduct an inquiry into means of enlarging and "properly equipping the police force."

The group also found fault with police department budget cuts and declared that "recommendations of the county manager regarding appropriations for the police department have seriously weakened effective operation" of the department.

Opposition to the resolution for reinstatement was expressed by a number of speakers including Ralph D. Boyd, past president of the group; O. W. Way and G. B. Birrel.

Speaking in favor of it were Robert Sherwin, vice president of the organization; Charles Buscher and Howard Kline.

The county council will meet at 2 p. m. today to act on the entire affair.

Firemen Battle Alexandria Blaze

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

VIEW OF ALEXANDRIA'S GENERAL ALARM FIRE WAS TAKEN FROM KING ST.

Sample Safe, Tools, Stolen From Dealer

Cracksmen Want To Get Practice, Police Deduce

A 1949 floor sample safe, and tools, were stolen over the weekend by yeggs, who, police believe, wanted them for practice with an eye to future operations.

The same gang is believed responsible for the theft of two other safes, and the battering open of a third, in business establishments in the same general area during the period.

The floor sample, a small model valued at $153, was removed from the Mosler Safe Co., 1020 15th st. nw. The intruders entered through an unlocked rear door, police said. The stolen tools, which included chisels, were valued at $100.

A small, rose-colored safe, containing $150, was stolen from the Singer Sewing Machine Co., 1340 G st. nw., by thieves who apparently climbed a fire escape to enter by breaking a second-floor window. A lock was pried off a rear door, and the safe rolled out.

The third place entered was David's Grill, 1123 17th st. nw., where the intruders, lowering themselves from a skylight, stole a small safe containing $500. The thieves also picked up a bottle of whisky.

A safe in the office of the Peoples Life Insurance Co., 1343 H st. nw., which contained only records, was broken open, an unsuccessful attempt was made to crack a second safe, while a third, in which was an undisclosed sum of money, was left untouched. Entrance was made through an unlocked window on the sixth floor, after a rooftop crossing from an adjoining building.

noticeable in the vicinity of Hains Point.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately determined. According to Ray Moore, vice president of the company, it apparently started in a laboratory room in about the center of the second floor.

Moore, who was in a front office on the second floor, said he saw smoke seeping under the door "I grabbed a fire extinguisher," he said, "ran to the door and opened it and a wall of smoke almost knocked me down."

Because of the smoke he was unable to get into the room, he said.

The building, which firemen said may have to be condemned because of the damage, was valued at about $60,000 according to Mallinson.

The structure is leased by the company from Frank Waggaman of Alexandria.

Court Denies Falls Church Two Schools

Fairfax County was legally upheld yesterday in its refusal to turn over to Falls Church the Oak Street Elementary School and the Falls Church High School, both built by the county and located within city limits.

A court opinion was handed down by Judge C. G. Quesenbery, a Waynesboro, Va., Corporation Court judge in Fairfax Circuit Court. Judge Quesenbery was called into the case when Fairfax Circuit Judge Paul E. Brown disqualified himself.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter said the court decision leaves the city no choice but to float a school bond issue. He said the city still has "over a million dollars" left before it hits the legal limit of its bonded indebtedness.

Dr. Joseph Seay, acting city school board chairman, said after hearing the decision, that "we're going ahead and furnish schools to the people of Falls Church. If it takes a bond issue, then that's what we'll do."

In his opinion, the judge held:

"There is no objection to the county's owning property within the confines of the city, for school purposes or other county purposes. . . . Certainly, in proceedings whereby Falls Church became a city of the second class, the county of Fairfax could not be divested of its schools, simply because of their geographical location."

He also ruled that a 1948 amendment to Virginia annexation laws, which provides for acquisition of schools annexed by a city, could not apply in the case of Falls Church.

The current action, said the judge, is "clearly" not an annexation proceeding, "nor are the schools located in the 'territory which Falls Church now proposes to annex."

Falls Church Gets 2

The decision held the county would have to relinquish two other schools, the Madison School and its Jefferson annex, both of which were originally owned by Falls Church before its school system was merged with the county in 1942.

The action leaves Falls Church's new school superintendent, Irvin H. Schmitt, with only the Madison Jefferson elementary school to run.

Falls Church elementary and high school pupils will, however, attend all three schools during the coming year under the same districting arrangements as last year, under a tuition arrangement with the county.

Judge Quesenbery said his opinion, given informally yesterday, would be made formal within a few days.

Population Shows 30% Rise Here

The District of Columbia's population on July 1, 1948, was 863,000—a 30 per cent increase since the official 1940 census, the Census Bureau said yesterday.

The bureau's estimate of the population of the metropolitan area is still in preparation.

The Washington Board of Trade's is now completing estimates of the population of the District and metropolitan area, both current and projected through 1950. The estimates are expected to released by September 1, a spokesman said.

The Census Bureau's latest figure for the District is 35,000 below the provisional estimate the bureau released a year ago. The Board of Trade's estimate a year ago was only 3000 more than the bureau's new figure.

Only three States showed a greater increase than the District. Nevada led with a 41.9 per cent increase, and California and Arizona both were credited with a 40.9 increase.

Of the 200,000 persons comprising the 30 per cent increase in Washington's population, 117,000 were persons who migrated here from other areas. It was one of the highest migration increases in the country.

Population of the United States as a whole was reported to have increased 10.6 per cent, or from 131,669,275 in 1940 to 146,113,000 in 1948.

Krug Ruling May Settle Pool Row

Interior Secretary Gets New Plan Today For Re-Opening of Anacostia Unit

Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug today will decide whether to end the swimming pool controversy and reopen Anacostia pool or to maintain his stand against the District Recreation Board.

He is to consider this morning results of another meeting late yesterday between Interior and Recreation Board officials. If he approves the "compromise" worked out by the two groups last Friday, and yesterday, the plan can be considered at the 2:30 p. m. monthly Recreation Board meeting.

Meanwhile, water was flowing into the Anacostia-pool last night for the first time since Krug ordered it closed June 29 after racial disputes there. National Capital Parks Superintendent Irving C. Root said it was in anticipation of a possible settlement.

"We don't want to waste any swimming time if it's possible to settle it," he said. He said he assumed Krug had ordered the water to flow.

A. E. Demaray, assistant National Park Service director, said yesterday afternoon Krug had neither accepted nor rejected the compromise when it was put before him. Last night Demaray said, the latest negotiations had added little new on the pool problem but had worked out some kinks in the proposed general recreation agreement between the two agencies.

Demaray said the whole matter would be put before Krug again this morning and his decision taken to the Recreation Board meeting by Irving C. Root, National Capital Parks superintendent and Recreation Board member.

The proposed "compromise" would settle the swimming pool controversy and permit quick reopening of the Anacostia pool, closed during the July heat wave. Details of the "compromise" have not been made public.

Meanwhile, Dr. Joseph O. Lohman of the University of Chicago arrived here yesterday "to offer my fund of information and experience" in aiding Interior's Park Police help handle "the chronic problem" of race relations.

His arrival was met with a blast of disapproval from the Federation of Citizens Associations which called him "unfit for this job."

Lohman directed the staff work for last year's report by the National Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital. The citizens group said the report was "filled with inaccuracies and half truths" and that this alone was enough to make Lohman "unfit" to work on the problem here.

The federation said the recently set-up Citizens Interracial Committee of 17 Negro and 17 white citizens should iron out problems here.

The federation also released a letter to Krug, charging him with "trying to solve the recreation problem in Washington by the method used by a dictator, and, at least here, it will not work."

The letter, signed by Federation President John H. Connaughton, declared "segregation has always been recognized and practiced by all races and groups everywhere." It requested Krug "to leave these problems" to "the people themselves, which in this instance is the Interracial Committee . . ."

Lohman said he came to work exclusively with the Park Police, not to make policy.

He began classroom sessions yesterday with the Park Police officers. Lohman feels education in police circles is "meaningless if not started at the top." He said he might meet with the 110 privates later this week.

The acting Metropolitan Police Chief, Inspector Clarence Talley, said last night he probably would send someone to sit in on the meetings, at Park Police invitation, "to find out what it's all about."

81st Congress Action Forecast On Home Rule

D. S. Subcommittee's 5-2 Vote Refusing Tabling of Issue Called Significant

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 5-2 District subcommittee vote refusing to table Washington home rule legislation yesterday gave the strongest indication to date that the issue may reach the House for action in the Eighty-first Congress.

After its vote, the subcommittee discussed forwarding the home-rule issue to the full House District Committee, but postponed its decision on that until next Tuesday.

Home-rule sponsors have expressed belief right along that if the home rule legislation reaches the 25-member District Committee, it will be forwarded to the House. Once before the House, sponsors are equally confident a home-rule bill would be passed.

Maybe Not Until 1950

But while pointing the way to an eventual House test on home rule, yesterday's subcommittee discussion also forecast that the bill will not reach the House floor before next year. Members said they will recommend that the full committee postpone its home-rule decision until after January.

This delay, however, would not erase the progress to date—the Senate-approved home rule bill, now before the House group, would carry over to the next session.

The subcommittee meeting, an executive session, was attended by seven members, and by District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) McMillan did not vote.

Vote Announced

The vote against tabling was announced by Subcommittee Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.).

He said there was no formal move to substitute a bill to give the District a nonvoting delegate in the House in place of other measures whose main feature is a representative council and city manager form of government.

Harris said he did not favor personally postponing action until next week.

"I felt that it should be submitted to the full committee," he said. But he explained that some members wanted more time for studying some phases of the legislation.

As to when the bill might reach the House, Harris said:

"I doubt very seriously the wisdom of trying to force the thing out for consideration this session. There are so many divergent views that I doubt very seriously the best job would be done.

Crossing Encore

Woman Runs As Express Hits Auto

A 27-year-old Washington woman ran to safety last night at the Melrose railroad crossing in Hyattsville seconds before a crack Baltimore & Ohio passenger train crashed into her stalled auto.

The woman, Mrs. Ollie Follis, 909 Columbia rd. nw., said her car stalled as she was driving across the tracks.

She was attempting to push it, she said, when she heard the roar of the train speeding toward her. With the locomotive but a hundred yards away, she said, she scuttled off the tracks.

The train, the Diplomat, bound for St. Louis, crashed into the vehicle and drove it 300 yards along the track.

Mrs. Follis is the wife of a Fort Dix, N. J., soldier, Cpl. Robert F. Follis. She is employed as a checker in a cleaning establishment.

It was the second time within a week that a stalled car had been hit by a train on the Melrose crossing.

Polio Victim's Sister Here Also Stricken

Two Woodley Road Cases Bring District's Total to 18 for 1949

The 5-year-old sister of a 4-year-old boy who last week was stricken with the disease was reported to the District health department yesterday as a polio case herself.

This brought to 18 the number of cases in the District this year.

In addition, one case each was reported yesterday from Prince Georges County, Arlington and Alexandria.

The brother and sister live in the 3300 block Woodley rd. nw. Both are in Children's Hospital. The girl was admitted to the hospital August 4—the same day on which her brother was reported as having contracted polio. He had been admitted July 31.

The two children are the first polio cases from the same family reported this year in the District, the health department said.

Other cases reported yesterday included a four-year-old girl of the 400 block 48th ave., Capitol Heights, Md., Prince Georges County, admitted to Children's Hospital August 5; a 17-year-old boy of the 1000 block S. 17th st., Arlington, admitted to Alexandria Hospital July 25; and a 19-year-old girl of the 1100 block South Washington st., Alexandria, admitted to Georgetown Hospital August 5.

Drunken Driver Is Sent to Jail For 115 Days

A Blandensburg, Md., man, with a record of 25 arrests, was sentenced to 115 days in jail yesterday as a result of drunken escapades Saturday night while driving.

Charles R. Cubbage, 32, 5202 Quincy st., Blandensberg, was given the sentence after he told Trial Magistrate Arthur Owens in Hyattsville Police Court that he couldn't pay a $400 fine.

Cubbage was found guilty of driving while drunk, driving with a revoked permit, reckless driving, and assault on a State trooper.

D. C. Asks Bids For Razing of 51 Buildings

Bids for razing five abandoned schools and 46 other buildings on sites of proposed school playgrounds were invited yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Offers are to be submitted to Room 4054 Municipal Center, and will be opened at 2 p. m. Monday.

The schools to be torn down are: Smallwood Elementary, I st. between 3d and 4th sts. sw.; Logan Elementary, 3d and G sts. ne.; Wallach Elementary, D st. between 7th and 8th sts. se.; Tyler Elementary, 11th st. near G st. se. and Brightwood Elementary, Georgia ave. and Peabody st. nw.

The other structures to be razed are 11 abandoned buildings on the site of Sphax Elementary School playground on Half st. near N st. sw.; 31 dwellings on the site of the proposed playground for the Logan School; and four vacant dwellings on the site of the Tyler School playground.

Driver Pays $11 For Whizzing by President on Hill

President Truman drove carefully back to Washington yesterday after a weekend at his retreat in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains—but the trip cost another motorist $11.

Maryland State Trooper Patrick Stakem charged William A. Good of Harrisburg, Pa., with reckless driving after he broke into the six-car presidential procession and then passed the Chief Executive on a hill.

Good was arrested 2 miles south of Urbana, Md. He was charged at State Police headquarters at Frederick, where he put up $11.

President Truman, with Mrs. Truman beside him, drove the 70 miles to Washington from the Thurmont, Md., camp, averaging about 45 miles an hour.

Study Continues On City Manager In Alexandria

Recommendation of a man to fill the job of Alexandria city manager will be made at a City Council meeting tonight, a council member said last night.

A special City Council committee met last night to consider the question of filling the job. Previously the committee had narrowed the field of 30 applicants down to 2.

Says Older Drivers Are Safer

Physician, 88, Protests Plan To Re-Test Drivers at Age 65

An energetic octogenarian yesterday threw down the gauntlet to Traffic Director George E. Keneipp on his proposal that drivers past 65 should be given physical reexaminations.

Dr. Earl E. Dudding, retired physician, founder and former director of the Prisoners Relief Society, has written the District Commissioners voicing strong opposition to the proposal and its proponent.

The 88-year-old protester wrote the Commissioners that he knew 50 men past 70 years of age who drove every day and never got a traffic ticket. "I had a hard time to find a dozen men between 25 and 50 years of age who had not figured in a bad traffic accident."

Dr. Dudding said he had driven a car daily for "some 35 years and never received a traffic ticket. I have been at the wheel of an automobile to the tune of 300,000 miles and 40 per cent of this driving has been at night."

At his home, 1357 Maryland ave. ne., Dr. Dudding said he could easily locate 200 men past 70 who drive daily without accidents. He cited insurance company statistics that persons 65 and over caused only 3.5 per cent of fatal accidents and 2.4 per cent of the nonfatal ones.

None on Music, Car Rental

Sales Tax Valid on Funerals If Material Bill Is Itemized

Funeral directors were authorized yesterday to charge sales tax on materials only in connection with funerals if they are listed separately on bills.

District Sales Administrator Allan F. Brooke ruled that the tax should be imposed on caskets, grave vaults, clothes and any other personal property used in funerals. If a bill is rendered in lump sum with no breakdown of materials and services, the tax should be collected on the total bill.

Such services as transportation, rentals of cars for friends, employment of clergymen and musicians are not taxable, Brooks ruled.

Meanwhile, three sales tax inspectors continued a door to door survey of Washington Business establishments yesterday. In general, merchants were found to have applied for or obtained certificates or registration, although on H st. ne. 10 of 46 places visited had not registered and at another 11 firm principals were absent and no record of registration was produced.

The inspectors began on Friday afternoon with one working the 1300 and 1400 blocks of H st. ne., another on G st. nw from 11th to 15th sts. and the third in Georgetown on M st. nw. from Key Bridge to Wisconsin ave. nw. Yesterday they continued in the same areas.

The H st. checker reported one dress shop complained that customers professed ignorance of the tax and frequently refused to pay.

Chief Auditor William Bogardus, who is supervising the enforcement, said the noncompliance with the registration is centered in one and two-man establishments which rely on part-time accounting services to handle such matters for them. Several completed applications while the inspectors were there.

A total of 12,521 applications have been received by the sales tax staff.

Sleuth Gets New Teeth, and His Man

There was a sly gleam in the eyes of the white-haired customer as he arose from the dental chair in the office of John T. Stachura, dental technician, 1214 New York ave. nw.

As the customer experimentally chomped his new dentures, Stachura asked: "How do they fit?"

"Fine, just fine," said the customer. "How much do I owe you?"

Stachura did some calculating: two impressions, made Thursday; temporary fitting, Friday; final fitting, Monday. He said: "That'll be $45."

The customer handed over the cash, in marked money, then disclosed his identity—Lieut. H. L. Carper, head of the police narcotics squad. Then he casually observed: "You're under arrest."

Stachura was charged with violation of the District Dental Act—making dentures and selling them without the prescription of a dentist. He posted $500 collateral. His case comes up in court today.

Lieutenant Carper told reporters later that his office had received complaints about Stachura's operations. Carper, as a sleuth without a tooth of his own considered himself a natural to do the investigating.

Over $4 Claim

Boy Admits Firing Kin's Store, Home

Miffed at his uncle over $4, a 15-year-old Montgomery County boy burned down the uncle's store and the house in which he lived, county juvenile officials reported yesterday.

Sergeant Eugene E. Brown said the youth admitted both cases of arson after questioning.

Officials declined to give the boy's name, but said he lived on MacArthur blv., about 2 miles south of Great Falls, near the scene of both fires.

Brown gave this account of the confession:

Early last month the boy said he was promised $8 by the uncle to dig some ditches, but was paid only $4. He argued, but it did no good.

Then, on July 6, the boy set fire to some rags and paper in an upstairs room of the house his uncle lived in. The entire second story was demolished before firemen could douse the flames.

On July 24, the boy told Sergeant Brown, he soaked some newspapers in kerosene, stuffed them under the nearby general store owned by his uncle, and touched a match to them. The store burned to the ground.

Then, the youth told Brown, "I went back to my house and went to bed." The loss in the two fires was about $7000, Brown said.

Police, investigating both blazes, immediately suspected arson but had no suspects. Then area youngsters began talking. They told how the 15-year-old had bragged of setting the fires.

Sergeant Brown kept a watch for the boy for two weeks, but the youth eluded him. Finally, Brown persuaded the boy's mother to bring him into juvenile offices at Rockville Saturday. The confession followed, the sergeant said.

Safe Robbery Fails

An "amateur" safecracker, who broke into the Frazier & Clark Motor Co., in Falls Church last weekend, drilled a half dozen holes in a office safe, but failed to make off with $700 inside it.

Falls Church Police Chief E. H. Howe said the would-be thief used the garage's own tools in his attempt to pick the lock.

Boone's Service Station in the city, also was broken into over the weekend, Howe said, but nothing was stolen from the premises. Both gas stations are within three blocks of each other on South Washington st., Falls Church.

$9000 Settles Suit

A $9000 consent judgment was entered yesterday in District Court in a suit brought as the result of a traffic accident in which a 5-year-old boy received a fractured skull.

The boy is Stewart Waschler, 4918 4th st. nw. The suit was brought by his father, Max, against the Quaker City Linoleum Co. and its salesman, Maxwell Goldman, whose car allegedly hit the boy.

The suit, filed through attorneys William R. Lichtenberg and Joseph Luria, said that Stewart was struck while crossing the street in front of his home on June 10, 1948.

Ex-Government Man Indicted As Swindler in Surplus Deal

A former Government employe was indicted yesterday on charges of swindling two persons of more than $3500 on the promise he could facilitate the sale of surplus property.

He is Bryant O. Pearce, 35, listed in records as living at 316 18th pl. ne. at the time of the alleged offense. His was one of 63 cases resulting in indictments from the District grand jury.

One of the charges against Pearce was brought by Theodore J. Scheve, who was convicted in April of being a stickman at a dice game here. Scheve, now in the restaurant business, said business was bad when he spoke to Pearce about the possibility of a Government position. Scheve said he believed Pearce had "connections," police said.

According to court papers, Pearce then proposed to get 1500 fountain pens held by the Government as surplus property. Scheve said he paid $3000 to Pearce for the pens but got nothing.

The other complaint concerning Pearce was brought by Michael J. Reidy, 718 Richmond ave., Silver Spring, Md. Reidy said Pearce promised to get him a Cadillac that was seized from the Japanese. Reidy paid over $553.50 for the vehicle but never received it, he said. The payment allegedly took place in February on 16th st. beside the Statler Hotel.

A first degree murder indictment was returned against Mrs. Mary L. Benefield, 27, listed on court papers as living at 507 2d st. sw. She is charged with stabbing Wilbert Pollard, 39, of 423 10th st. sw., in the heart on July 4, according to police, after he accused her of robbing him.

James Dunlap, 33, listed on court papers as living at 738 9th st. se., was charged with manslaughter in the traffic death of John H. Price, 27, living at 526 7th ne. according to police. Police said Dunlap was driving without a District permit when his car struck a tree on Bladensburg rd. and Earl pl. ne. Price, a passenger, died in the crash.

Charles T. Sosebee, 24, and Odell K. Manly, 26, both imprisoned in South Carolina, were indicted on charges of perpetrating a $1014 holdup with a sawed-off shotgun. Robbed was a liquor store at 1601 Montello ave. ne.

Stafford D. Lowry, alias Nick Coogie, 21, of 808 Xenia st. se., according to court papers, was charged with blackmail. He forced his victim, Gail G. Burnett, 31, of 20 Chesapeake st. se., to pose in his shorts for a lewd picture and then demanded $1000 not to publish it, according to the indictment.

James M. Franklin, 41, was charged with setting up a gaming table by keeping two slot machines at 1555 9th st. nw.

Indicted on charges of possession of numbers slips and operating a lottery were, according to court papers, Dora Thomas, 1768 U st. nw., and Irving Hall, alias Irving Halprin, 54, no address given.

Police Adjust 104 Tickets Here in Week

A total of 104 traffic tickets was "fixed" last week, Metropolitan Police reported yesterday.

Among the adjustments reported was a ticket cancellation for Steve E. Averinos, of 2414 Southern ave. se., who was picked up for parking in a no-parking zone.

The Traffic Division canceled Averinos' ticket when he explained that his key had broken off in the ignition switch.

Another ticket, placed on a Washington Post car for parking in an alley, was changed to a warning after John J. Corson, Post Circulation Director, explained that the auto was parked in the alley only temporarily to load newspapers.

The following tickets were canceled on grounds of diplomatic immunity: Jose Vargas Mata, Peruvian Embassy, parking abreast; P. C. Pell, British Embassy, parking by a barricade; Claude R. Tiers, French Embassy, parking for over 18 hours; Rene Wegelin, Swiss Embassy, parking by a red meter, and Burton K. Gilligan, Parkistan Embassy, parking in a public space.

Dr. Nutting Dead at 76 of Heart Attack

Dr. Perley G. Nutting, 76, optical physicist and researcher in the development of motion pictures, died of a heart attack yesterday at the intersection of 10th st. nw. and Constitution ave.

According to police, he was stricken about 10 a. m. on his way from his daily trip to the Geological Survey laboratory in the Interior Building.

A resident of Washington since 1903, he lived at 3216 Oliver st. nw.

Dr. Nutting had an outstanding career in two scientific fields. He came to Washington in 1903 to do optical research in the National Bureau of Standards. In 1912 he became assistant director of research at Eastman Kodak Co., and the following year he went to the Westinghouse Electric Co. as director of research.

After the First World War, Dr. Nutting became a consulting engineer for private optical companies and specialized in motion picture engineering.

Several years later, in 1928, he returned to Washington as a geophysicist in the Geological Survey, where he studied and became an authority on formation of clays and silica and their uses.

Dr. Nutting's first wife, the former Edith Eva Lightfoot, died after bearing him four sons. In 1928 he married the former Julia E. Stouffer, who survives him.

His sons are: Ian F. Nutting of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Kelvin L. Nutting, USN, of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station; Edward V. Nutting and Perley G. Nutting, jr., both of Washington.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

Driver Hurt In Maryland Smashup Dies

Henry C. Mair, 44, District automobile firm employe, died yesterday at Providence Hospital from injuries suffered Saturday in an automobile accident near Bristol, Md.

He was the fourth Washingtonian to die of traffic injuries in nearby Maryland accidents since midnight Saturday.

Three Women Killed

The other three victims, all women, were killed when the car in which they were riding overturned on Route 5 Bryantown. Police listed them as:

Mrs. Bertha Campbell, 25, of 3627 11th st. nw.

Miss Sarah Stevenson, 32, of 1004 Kenilworth ave. ne.

Jane Alexander, 27, of 1242 K st. se.

The driver of the car, Herman B. Coates, 23, of 2719 11th st. nw., has been charged with manslaughter and reckless driving, police said. Coates was severely bruised.

Other passengers injured were Willie T. Jones, 31, of 1514 T st. nw., fractured collar bone, and Jefferson D. Pugh, 34, of 1246 11th st. nw. They were taken to Physicians Memorial Hospital at La Plata.

Police said the smashup occurred when the automobile went out of control, bounced off a highway guard rail, and turned over several times.

Asleep at Wheel

Mair, an employe for 28 years of Emerson & Orme, Inc., was driving to his summer home in Deal, Md., when he fell asleep, according to police. The auto struck a culvert. Mair was alone.

He lived at 420 Longfellow st. nw. His wife, Mrs. Mary C. Mair, and a sister, Mrs. Edward L. Kettler of 317 W. Boulevard dr., Alexandria, survive.

In a District accident, police charged Fred Diggs, 36, of 32 G st. sw., with passing a stop sign after his car collided with a Fifth Precinct patrol wagon Sunday, at 2d st. and Virginia ave. sw.

Injured when the wagon overturned was Pvt. Frank Hardesty, 24, who was treated at Casualty Hospital. Pvt. Harris L. Faircloth, 26, the driver, and Diggs were unhurt.

Husband Arrested On Leaving Hospital

Prince Georges County police yesterday arrested James C. Rust, 57, of 5721 39th ave., Hyattsville, Md., as he was released from Leland Memorial Hospital, and charged him with assault with intent to kill. He was released under $1000 bond pending a preliminary hearing Thursday in Hyattsville Police Court.

The warrant was swor nout by his estranged wife, Mrs. Elsa Rust, 51, whom Rust allegedly grazed with a bullet Saturday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Helen Huber, 6210 41st ave., Hyattsville. After the shooting, Rust was seided with a heart atta k and was rushed t othe hospital.

Mrs. Sumner Welles Dies Unexpectedly in Switzerland

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. SUMNER WELLES, died in her hotel at Lausanne, Switzerland. The former Mathilde Townsend, she was the wife of the former Undersecretary of State

Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the former United States Undersecretary of State, died Sunday night in a hotel in Lausanne, Switzerland. She was about 64.

Mrs. Welles, who had gone to Switzerland with her husband who was attempting to regain his health, died "most unexpectedly," Welles said.

She became ill several days ago, and had been confined to her bed in her hotel room. Friends said she was stricken with peritonitis but had declined to undergo an operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Welles sailed for Europe early in July and had been at Lausanne since July 19, expecting to remain there for about two months.

Welles had been in ill health since he collapsed in the snow while walking near his country estate at Oxon Hill, Md., on Christmas Eve. He slipped and fell into an icy stream and was found unconscious and near death several hours later.

Relatives Flying There

Although he made a dramatic recovery, Welles was said to be extremely weak when he sailed for Europe last month. At that time he said he was making the trip to "try to get my health back"

Welles said relatives of Mrs. Welles are flying to Switzerland and that his son is coming by plane from England. He plans to return to the United States as soon as possible, he said.

Hotel officials said no definite funeral arrangements have been made, but that the body of Mrs. Welles would be returned to the United States.

Both Welles and his wife, the former Mathilde Townsend, had been married before.

His marriage to Miss Esther Slater of Boston ended in divorce in 1923. Welles had two sons, Benjamin and Arnold, by the first marriage.

Daughter of Washingtonians

Mrs. Welles' first marriage was to Peter Goelet Gerry, wealthy socialite and former Democratic Senator from Rhode Island. Married in 1910, they were divorced in 1924.

Welles and the former Mrs. Gerry were married in June, 1925.

Mrs. Welles was the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Townsend, wealthy and socially prominent Washingtonians. Her mother was the daughter of Senator William Lawrence Scott of Erie, Pa., who was said to have amassed great wealth from his work in developing the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Townsend mansion at 2121 Massachusetts ave. nw., now vacant, was the scene of many of the city's brilliant social events.

When Mathilde Townsend was married to Gerry in the drawing room of the mansion, the room was decorated with white orchids. President and Mrs. Taft and the entire Cabinet and diplomatic corps attended the wedding.

After her marriage to Welles in 1925, Mrs. Welles often accompanied her husband on his trips abroad.

Sumner Welles became Undersecretary of State in 1937 and resigned from the post in 1943. He had previously served briefly as Ambassador to Cuba and had attended many international conferences.

Though the Welles owned homes in Palm Beach, Fla., and Bar Harbor, Me., they spent most of their time at their estate near Oxon Hill.

C. H. Saffell Rites Today; Retired Postoffice Official

Funeral services for Charles Henry Saffell, 75, retired postoffice inspector, will be held today at 10 a. m. at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Saffell died Saturday at his home in the Ontario Apartments, 2853 Ontario rd. nw.

A lifelong resident of Washington, he attended St. John's College High School and began his 50-year postal career in 1895 as a clerk at the City Postoffice.

Five years later he transferred to the Postoffice Department as a clerk in the Washington Division Headquarters inspection service. By 1909 he had risen to chief clerk of the Washington Division and seven years later was appointed an inspector with assignment to the Washington Division.

After building up an outstanding record in apprehending postal law violaters, he was given a special assignment in 1922 in the Chief Inspector's Office, remaining there for five years. Returned to Washington Division headquarters, he was once again called to the Chief Inspector's Office in 1942 to handle special assignments brought about by wartime conditions. He retired in 1945.

Among Mr. Saffell's special assignments were work for the Secretary of State during World War I and investigations for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Commerce Department. For a time he acted as associate director of the Public Works Administration's Division of Investigation.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Minnie E. Saffell; a sister, Mrs. Frank A. Gibbons, and a brother, Alexander F. Saffell, both of Washington.

Alexander Clarke, Jr.

Funeral services for Alexander S. Clarke, jr., 63, of 817 Kennedy st. nw., a real estate dealer, will be held Wednesday at 10 a.m. at the Church of the Nativity, Georgia ave. and Peabody st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

A descendant of one of Washington's oldest families, he was stricken with a heart attack and died Saturday in Sulphur Springs, W. Va. He had been in the real estate business here for more than 40 years. His offices were at 1427 I st. nw.

Mr. Clarke was the son of the late Alexander S. Clarke, a founder of Home Savings Bank, and later a director of the American Security & Trust Co.

Chained Dog Puts Bite On U. S. Tax Collector

Houston, Tex. (U.P.).—Few people throw out the welcom mat for a tax collector. William O. Sturman ran into more trouble than he could handle.

Sturman went to a residence to serve a warrant for the internal revenue department, and, finding nobody home, started to a garage apartment in the rear to make an enquiry.

He passed a dog. It was chained and he paid it no attention. But, that was a mistake. It was a long chain. The dog attacked Sturman, biting him on the leg. In an effort to escape, Sturman became entangled in the chain and fell, breaking his arm.

E. A. McIlhenny

Avery Island, La., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Edward Avery McIlhenny, a world-famous naturalist, explorer, writer and industrialist who was indicted in the Louisiana scandals of 1939, died today at his palatial home on Avery Island. He was 77.

McIlhenny accompanied Admiral Robert Peary on a Polar expedition in 1898, and two years later led his own expedition into the Arctic past Point Barrow.

While in the Arctic, he rescued the crew of a sealing schooner, which included the late Jack London, noted author.

He was linked with the Louisiana scandals when he and former Gov. Richard W. Leche were indicted for using the mails to defraud during September, 1940.

Mrs. Nella Meyers Stewart

Funeral services for Mrs. Nella Meyers Stewart, 58, of 18 T st. nw., founder of the Cat Fanciers of Washington, will be held at 9 a. m. today at St. Martin's Catholic Church, North Capitol and T sts. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Stewart died Saturday night at Homeopathic Hospital following a year's illness.

An authority on silver Persian cats, Mrs. Stewart was well-known by cat breeders throughout the country for the prize cats she raised. She founded the Washington Cat Fanciers group in 1946. Since then the group has been sponsoring cat shows here annually.

She was the wife of Orville H. Stewart, a magazine writer.

Dr. Philip L. Hill

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 8 (AP).—Dr. Philip Lancelot Hill, 60, Colonial Heights health officer and city councilman, died in Petersburg Hospital today.

He was stricken with a heart attack Sunday as he taught a class in the Highland Methodist Church Sunday school.

Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday at 3 p. m. from Highland church with the Rev. O. B. Newton, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery at Richmond.

F. J. Clayton Rites Today; Ex-FSA Aide

Funeral services for Frank J. Clayton, 71, retired Federal Security Agency executive, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Clayton died Sunday following a heart attack suffered while attending an Odd Fellows picnic at Great Falls. He lived at 1400 S. Barton st., Arlington.

A native of Boston, he went West while a young man and was employed as a printer for a time. He lived in Boise, Idaho for 14 years, where he held the position of chairman of the State industrial accident commission for several years.

He came to Washington in 1921 to enter Government service as a Federal agent of vocational rehabilitation for the Department of Education. At the time of his retirement three years ago he was director of vocational rehabilitation for the Western States, Hawaii and Alaska under the Federal Security Agency.

Mr. Clayton was a member of the I.O.O.F. for 34 years, belonging to the Arlington Lodge. He was also a member of the Retired Civil Service Employes Association and formerly was an Elk.

Active in church affairs, he was a member of the vestry of Trinity Episcopal Church, Arlington, and a past president of the church men's club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marie C. Pegram Clayton; two sons, Charles W. Clayton of Washington, and F. Randolph Clayton of Muskegon, Mich.; a daughter, Mrs. Ann P. Redmond, of Greensburg, Pa.; a brother, Charles W. Clayton of Boston; a sister, Mrs. Charles Beale of Cambridge, Mass., and two grandchildren.

William Rea Dies; District Bank Official

William Rea, an assistant trust officer of the American Security and Trust Co., died Sunday at his home, 113 Anne st., Takoma Park, Md., after an illness of several months.

He was associated with the firm since 1918, and was an authority on tax laws. For many years, he served as chairman of the taxation committee of the fiduciaries section of the D. C. Bankers Association.

Mr. Rea, after education in the public schools of Virginia, became a school teacher in the elementary grades. Later he took courses at the Strayer Business School, now the Strayer School of Accountancy, the American School of Banking and the American University. He was employed in the accounting department of the Southern Railway prior to his present job.

Funeral services will be held at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church Wednesday at 11 a. m.

Judge G. E. Huston

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 8 (AP).—Judge George Thomas Huston, 86, of the Wicomico County Orphans' Court, died yesterday in a nursing home near here. He was serving his second term on the bench. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Four Breaks Solved In Silver Spring

Montgomery County police said yesterday they had cleared up a series of four housebreaks with the arrest of a 47-year-old laundry worker, Moses Wynns, 331 U st. nw.

They said Wynns had signed a confession admitting that he broke into the four business places, taking about $58 in cash and some merchandise.

Wynns was arrested early Sunday shortly after police investigated a housebreaking report at the Texaco filling station on East-West Highway at Colesville rd., where a cash register had been looted of 80 cents in small change and some fountain pens and flashlights stolen.

When Police Sergt. Charles Peter spotted Wynns near Georgia ave. near the District Line, the policeman said the suspect tried to hide a jimmy tool before he was apprehended.

Questioned at the police substation in Silver Spring, Wynns reportedly admitted the housebreaking and these three others on the night of July 24:

Falkland Drug Store, 1401 East-West hwy., about $18 in change from a pinball machine; Wayside Grill, 1008 East-West hwy., about $40 from a cash register, and Maloney's Hardware Store, 8126 Georgia ave., a .22-caliber rifle, cartridges and fishing tackle.

Wynns was charged with four counts of housebreaking, two of larceny, and two more of theft. Unable to raise the $4000 bond set, he was jailed for a hearing in Silver Spring Police Court on August 16.

Woman Survives Fall From Hotel Room

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Sally Evans, 31, fell out a 16th story window today—and escaped with nothing more than a possible skull fracture.

She landed on a six-foot-wide ledge projecting from the 15th floor.

Miss Evans, a dancing teacher, told police she felt faint, went to the window of her Hootel Belvedere room and toppled out.

Her mother, identified only as Mrs. Scatchard of Roanoke, Va., was notified.

Carmen Given Fine Rendition

By Paul Hume

The first of two performances of Carmen held the Watergate stage last night.

Saturday night the opera will be repeated. Last night's leading ladies, Winifred Heidt as Carmen, and Mina Cravi as Micaela, made the affair one of the finest Carmens it is possible to see today.

Heidt is a wonderful Carmen to watch and hear. Her figure, her voice, her complete portrayal of Merimee's sexy heroine is a spontaneously played affair. Behind the spontaneity lie years of study and planning that any such thorough portrait required. She sings with ease and sumptuous tone. Her stage business is always to the point. Happily she knows enough to let it go at that. She adds no fussy detail to mar her fine characterization.

Mina Cravi again sang her way to my heart with her tender but firm picture of Micaela. She realizes that the little country blonde would be nervous but not craven, and she acts accordingly.

And her singing—well, I thought I said it all in yesterday's paper, but no. There is more to say. And the best way to say it is to suggest that you do not mill her Nedda on Tuesday, her Marguerite on Wednesday or her repeat Micaela Saturday night. Her handling of the third act was perfect in every detail and vocally golden.

Vasso Argyris is a good Don Jose. If he could make all of his voice as fine as the upper part he would avoid such sounds as the next to the last tone in the Flower Song. He looks well in the role and sings it powerfully.

Grant Garnell is acceptable enough in his singing, but he should learn how much more to music there is than the mere production of tone. Rhythm is a vital factor, and he had all kinds of trouble with his part in the third act scene with Jose.

Clelia Venditti and Lorraine Calcagno sounded better than many gypsy girls in acts two and three. The quintet cannot be the success it should without hairline precision from singers and orchestra. Precision was not among the evening's chief factors, often due to conductor De Angelis' angular rushing of the voices and his failure to keep the orchastra together. The chorus sounded surprisingly well but the scenery looked as if the stage men had given up any hope of securing the right picture and just said, "Oh well, what's the difference?" Yet in important elements of principal singing and large effects, it was a good Carmen.

Tonight: Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagyiacci, with Telli, Cravi, Argyris.

Soviet Major, Romanian Pilot Flee Into Turkey

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 8. (UP).—A Soviet army major and a Romanian pilot arrived in Turkey today and asked for refugee status after fleeing from what they described as "Communist terror" in their respective countries.

Intelligence sources said Russian Major Nicolai Bonderiov fled to Turkey after committing what is regarded as a "crime" in Russia. They did not describe the nature of the crime.

These sources said Romanian Pilot Dimitrie Sever, who also asked for asylum, landed his Junkers-52 plane in Istanbul this morning. Sever was alone.

Falls Church Authorizes Water Main

Falls Church City Council last night authorized expenditure of $46,763 from its water bond fund for replacement of a 12-inch water main running from Great Falls st. to Seven Corners.

The council also voted to increase the city's water rate to multiple-dwelling housing, by fixing the charge at $4.50 a month for each living unit in a dwelling instead of $4.50 for each dwelling.

Affected by the rate boost will be about 1900 dwelling units, including 480 units in Tyler Gardens, 500 in Jefferson Village and 800 in Williston Apartments now under construction.

The council also authorized a loan of up to $50,000 from the American Security and Trust Co., Washington, to make up an anticipated temporary deficit in the city's operating funds, pending receipt of the bulk of tax money in December.

City Treasurer James E. Ferguson reported that 95.79 per cent of the city's 1948 real and personal taxes have been collected so far. His report showed $9000 in delinquent taxes collected since September 1948, leaving $11,950.72 still outstanding.

The council also received a report from Willy & Wilson, consulting engineering firm of Lynchburg, Va., which estimated the cost of extending the water system to Tyson's Crossroads in Fairfax County at $99,950.

"This is $47,000 more than we have in water bond funds," City Manager Roy F. Dunn told the council.

Hazelwood Asked To Name Election 'Bribe' Offerer

Richmond, Va., Aug. 8 (AP).—The State Board of Elections today requested Robert M. Hazelwood to appear August 16 at 11 a. m. and give the name of the person he alleged offered him $10,000 to desert candidate Remmie L. Arnold in the recent Democratic primary for Governor.

The letter to Hazelwood pointed out the elections board has no power to subpena him to appear before it and answer questions concerning the charge. But it did say:

"The board feels, however, that it cannot permit your statement to go unnoticed and that it should do everything within its power to clarify any misunderstanding in the mind of the public which might reflect upon the integrity of elections in Virginia."

It noted that Hazelwood was quoted as saying "that a prominent contractor had made an offer of $10,000 to desert the candidacy of Mr. Remmie L. Arnold."

Egg? This Chick Would Rather Smoke or Drink

Miami, Fla., Aug. 8 (AP).—There's a middle-aged chick hanging out at one of the local pubs, drinking, smoking and, occasionally, laying an egg.

And that is more than any of the other patrons at Mrs. Loraine Porto's Hialeah Bar can do.

The bird is Booger, a Rhode Island Red, friend of former Jockey Ben Jenkins, who says he likes his chick the way she is.

As for Mrs. Porto, she says, "I never served beer to a real chicken before, but I would say she holds her liquor pretty well—for a chicken."

Southeast Business Men Indorse UCS for District

The Southeast Business Men's Association, after a heated 2½-hour meeting last night, indorsed United Community Service here.

Members opposing the action expressed disapproval of certain controversial agencies "supported by UCS. The UCS is the Community Chest organization here.

Louis F. Frick, secretary, said the group heard Arthur Kruse, director of UCS, as well as representatives of the Urban League and the Washington Housing Association before its vote.

Frick said the association objected to "the inclusion of agencies which didn't furnish basic food, clothing, shelter or medicine, but felt that the Chest's overall good more than offset any objection."

Greenbelt Sets Sights to Buy Two Utilities

The Greenbelt City Council last night authorized City Manager Charles McDonald to survey the feasibility of purchase of the city's federally-owned water and electricity utilities.

McDonald said he had contacted University of Maryland experts who he hoped would aid in the survey to determine if municipal ownership would benefit the citizenry.

The council also voted to continue the customary procedure for appointment of officials to supervise the elections September 20.

Each councilman will name two election officials. Then, at the September 12 meeting, the council as a whole will appoint a judge of elections and a director of the count.

Five councilmen are to be elected. They will name one of their number as mayor.

Election officials receive $8 a day, and the election judge and count director receive $10.

Virginia Prison Camp Escapee Sought by Police

Greater Washington police were alerted last night for an 18-year-old convict who fled from Virginia State Prison Camp No. 30, about 4 miles west of Fairfax, around 4 p. m. yesterday.

Fairfax County police identified the escapee as Oscar Fred Cavin, jr., 22, who was sent to the camp several months ago from Richmond, where he was sentenced to serve 18 years for robbery. He was described as being 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighing 137 pounds, having brown hair and eyes and wearing a brown prison uniform.

Prison authorities said Cavin apparently slipped away from the camp to the edge of a wooded area nearby, where he was seen by a guard a second before he disappeared. Bloodhounds from the District Reformatory at Lorton were being used last night in a search of the area.

Marine Division Unit Elects Gen. Thomas

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, head of the equipment board at the Quantico, Va., Marine Corps Base, today was elected the first president of the First Marine Division Association.

Delegates to the four-day reunion here voted at their closing session to meet next year in Washington, D. C.

Band Concert Tonight

The Washington Boys Club concert band will play its sixth summer series concert tonight at 8 o'clock on the steps of the Capitol Plaza. Andrew Bodnar will conduct. Featured will be a medley of Victor Herbert selections.

Laborer Is Held Without Bail on Charge of Rape

Bennie Lee Carr, 28, a laborer, was held yesterday without bond for grand jury action on a charge of raping a 34-year-old omther after breaking into her apartment in the Kalorama rd. area.

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell ordered Carr held after the victim said she was forced to submit on pain of death.

James D. Graham, Carr's attorney, challenged the woman's identification of Carr. Graham said he was present in Police Headquarters when the woman pointed out another man as her assailant.

Guard Airmen Get Set for Camp

Heralding the arrival Saturday of the District Air National Guard at New Castle Air Force Base, Wilmington, Del., a 2'-man advance detachment will leave Andrews Air Force Base today.

The District's Air Guard, comprising approximately 600 officers and men, will undergo 15 days of field training under command of Col. Laidler B. Mackall. They will return August 27.

Participating units will include: 113th Fighter Group Headquarters; 121st (White House) Squadron; 213th Air Service Group Headquarters; Detachment A, 213th Air Service Group; 121st Utility Flight and 121st Weather Station.

Devoted Father, Consistently Good Provider, Separated From Spouse by Mutual Agreement, Has Lost Sense of Direction; He Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married 15 years, have a daughter 5 years old, and in my opinion my wife is an attractive girl and I was much in love with her until recently. Now I no longer know what my true feelings are for her—but that's getting ahead of the story.

We had a nice home and a good life together, it seemed to me, but three years ago we separated by mutual agreement and my wife returned to a job in the business world. She sold our home and bought another in the same neighborhood, with funds provided by me; and now she has her mother living with her, to take care of the child.

I visit the home frequently and take my daughter for weekend periods and also occasionally for evening outings to dinner and the movies. But even so I am convinced that the existing arrangement isn't good for the child and at times I have tried to stay away from her; but soon she will call me and I am right back where I started. I love the child dearly and seem to be happy only with her.

Developing Grudge Against All Women

MY WIFE refuses to get down to brass tacks about a divorce and I seem to be going in a vicious circle, trying to find a solution, and wondering if there is one. I have gone out with a few other women—mostly friends of friends of mine—since Kate and I parted; and they have tried to snap me out of it, but this hasn't worked too well, for I seem to have built up a grudge against all women.

Incidentally, I always provided well for my family and still do, including nice gifts at Christmas and other special days; but I am at my wits' end about the problem described. Can you help me?

S. L.

Half the Story Isn't Told Here

DEAR S. L.: Here is a case where, obviously, "Half the story hasn't been told." There is much more to the picture than meets the eye.

And as I reflect on Kate's new set-up, with her mother in the center of it and you on the outside looking in, inexplicably "bounced" from the nice home and good life you thought you had, I feel drawn to the conclusion that the untold portion of the story—the significant portion—has to do with your mother-in-law's aims and maneuvers, and with her influence on her daughter.

To digress a bit, the fact that you and Kate parted by mutual agreement after 13 years' marriage, when your only child was 2-years-old—scarcely out of babyhood—suggests that the new stresses of parenthood had something to do with it.

However, it seems unlikely that you fomented the break, for you were much in love with Kate and pleased with the status quo; and even now, though discarded, frustrated and exploited, you still seem concerned to "cherish" her in material ways, and to consider her wishes generally, while she seems indifferent to the difficulties of your position.

Pair Don't Know Why They Parted

HENCE I infer that Kate ostensibly pushed the separation, but that her mother was the backseat driver playing "hand of Fate,"—indirectly and insidiously encouraging a move that amounted to a relapse into juvenility for both of you. I daresay the mother—in the market for a new lease on matriarch security and executive rule—oozed sympathetic readiness to "stand by" Kate and do all possible to "make her lot easier" if Kate felt she must "make a change," etc., etc.

Thus to sum up, it occurs to me (1) that the mother has been using all of you as pawns in a self-serving drive since she first discerned the fly in the ointment of your marriage; (2) that this is "unconscious" on her part, and she would indignantly deny it, of course; and (3) that you are going in circles, and Kate is evading divorce, because fundamentally you are still attached—and altogether unsure about why you parted.

Before you can manage a problem you must understand its parts; you must have perspective on its past history to proceed foresightedly; and have suggested the foregoing clues, my final advice is to get expert first-hand help in exploring the bulk of your story not yet disclosed.

Paris Favors Slim-Skirted Silhouette

IN PARIS this month the high command of fashion is whittling away at the few remaining hopes women may have for a long, full-skirted silhouette.

Press reports from the French capital, where the annual fall fashion openings are taking place, tell a story of shorter, tighter skirts and a "whittled-down look for 1950." This is the general idea of the newest silhouette as exemplified in the designs of such top-notchers as Balmain, Desses, Molyneux, Schiaparelli and others who have displayed their work so far. Showings of other Paris houses will continue throughout August.

Reports from Paris on the current showings follow:

Clinging Sheaths

Paris, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Designer Jacques Fath put the accent on high necks, rounded shoulders and "snake hips" at a champagne-dripping gala that lasted past midnight Sunday.

His tall, blonde mannequins minced in their tight skirts down velvet runways watched intently by such personalities as screen stars Maria Montez and Annabella, Mrs. K. E. Bruce, wife of the U. S. Ambassador to Paris, and New York socialite Mrs. Bryan Foy.

Fath showed a clinging straight sheath gown with long sleeves, a high collar carried to a sharp line and an inset flare over one hip.

Collars were pointed or stiffly winged. Some had large revers and were buttoned down in front. Four-foot zippers down the back allowed the mannequins entrance to the super-slim creations.

Most formal gowns were hobble-skirted to the floor with dashing, accordion-pleated net flares falling from the waist or the center of the back.

One of these, called "glacier," was of ice-green satin with a pencil-slim skirt and two shoots of darker green net from the hips. Blue-green shimmering sequin bands sparkled in each dip of the accordion-pleated net.

Fath used yellow or pink roses at the neck or waist to give cocktail dresses a decidedly feminine note. He also used 4-foot bows placed at the neck or diagonally across the bust for accent.

Shorten Skirts

Paris (U.P.).—Pierre Balmain staged his showing at the exclusive Ambassador's ballroom on the Champs-Elysees. It featured such sumptious tid-bits as cocktail slippers with diamond heels, a gold-lined umbrella and a coat with three removable layers.

Skirt lengths were shorter—13½ inches from the floor—and so tight that the models required the most stringent corseting. Suit skirts were so pencil slim that the designer showed separate "Clam-Digger" pants for walking. The pants were faked to look like skirts, with two straight panels in front and back.

Marcel Rochas' collection concentrated on plunging necklines, to emphasize "the eternal attributes of seductive femininity." The necklines often measured four inches across and were slashed to the waist.

Rochas used fur lavishly throughout his collection, which was strictly reminine and easy to wear. Shoulders were gently rounded in daytime clothes, waists were at their normal place ,and full skirts cut on a bias with side drapery. For short evening gowns, Rochas showed many draped harem hemlines.

Asymetric Triumph

Paris ((NYHT)—Jean Desse's based his line on two themes: First, the "Lasso" with fullness whipped into spirals and second, the "Kite Line," with fabric folded like a paper knife, particularly in skirts.

Desses calls his creations the triumph of asymmetry. He relies on cut and technique to bring out the beauty of the fabric.

Shoulders and bodices feature an amplified shoulder-line; tops of the sleeves gape or form pockets or flaps, some fur-trimmed. The kite line takes care of the fullness of the skirts but frequently side panels, even on tailored skirts and wool dresses, are used to add interest. The lasso line in a stepped hobbleskirt gives a wrapped effect.

On most topcoats, Desses employs the flying stole. Princess coats are flap-pocketed with flapped rever treatment. Sports coats are faced plaid with flying fringe stole.

Griffe Highlights Trimmings

Paris (AP).—Jacques Griffe's new fall fashions include big-collared topcoats, bloused back bodices and full skirts designed to look bone straight. Such trimmings as drawer handles fashioned from steel beads and pinecones made of leather were the highlights of the show.

His skirts have fullness pulled to the back or front in order to maintain a slim silhouette. The top of the hips is frequently draped and bodices too are draped in all directions. Bloused backs fall from brief kimono sleeves or back yokes, into tight hip bands.

Subtle Collection

Paris, (NYHT).—Gres, the perfectionist presented a subtle, restrained collection stripped of gingerbread, trimmings and accessories. The line depends, uniquely, on perfection of cut and beauty of fabric for effect.

For day-time, plaid wools are featured in the linings of coats or forming part of the wool ensemble.

Her silhouette is purified though the cut remains skilled and at times intricate. Coats have large cape fronts with an occasional cape effect in the back and front, recalling pilgrims' cloaks. A full grege cape has a plaid back and is lined in green plaid worn over a black jersey dress. A brown wool coat on voluminous lines has a bicolor grege dress with a brown back. Town coats are fitted with tiny peplums or basque and fullness is found in unpressed folds below the waist. Light dresses of wool or jersey are worn with these.

National Woman's Party Honors Minister to Luxembourg

Representing Women in New Post, Mrs. Mesta Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

"I ACCEPTED the appointment as United States Minister to Luxembourg because I want to represent women," Mrs. George Mesta told some 250 guests last night in a brief farewell speech at a reception given in her honor by the National Woman's Party.

She pointed out that she had been a member of the NWP for about 15 years. "I want to continue to be a member as long as I live," she explained.

Mrs. Mesta is public relations chairman of the NWP, previously doing a stint as congressional chairman. It was about 15 years ago that Mrs. Sarah Thompson Pell of New York interested Mrs. Mesta in the NWP's goal—equal rights under the law, regardless of sex. Since then Perle Mesta has been an ardent supporter of the cause.

Congressmen There

There were no arguments on at least one subject as approximately 70 Congressmen gathered on the lawn at historic Alva Belmont House to bid adieu and bon voyage to the honoree. For invitations were issued only to the lawmakers (and wives) who are supporting or are friendly to the Equal Rights Amendment.

Dr. Agnes E. Wells, new national chairman of the NWP, received with Mrs. Mesta, as did Senator Margaret Chase Smith, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Miss Anita Pollitzer, honorary chairman of the NWP; and Dr. Florence A. Armstrong, vice chairman, NWP. For the event Dr. Wells chose a light blue dinner dress with a lace bodice and a chiffon skirt. Mrs. Mesta wore a black and white print dinner frock and Senator Smith's costume was a flowered sheer. Miss Pollitzer wore a long dark sheer frock and Mrs. Rogers wore a becoming white chiffon topped with a matching stole.

Proud of Pupil

As Mrs. Mesta spoke over the microphone in the garden, Speech Instructor Mrs. Hugh Butler beamed with pride. "I've never had such a hard working pupil," the said.

Bachelor Senator Joseph McCarthy was among the early arrivals, as were Senator and Mrs. John Spessard Holland, Senator and Mrs. Edward Martin, Senator and Mrs. R. C. Hendrickson, Senator and Mrs. Lester C. Hunt, Senator Harry Cain, Senator Virgil Chapman, Senator and Mrs. J. Allen Frear, Senator and Mrs. Frank P. Graham.

Others from the Senatorial contingent included Senator and Mrs. Guy Gillette, Senator and Mrs. Edward P. Thye, Senator John C. Stennis, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper.

Holding a court all her own was the new United States Treasurer, Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, chatting with Mrs. Leslie Biffle, wife of the Secretary of the Senate; Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the Mint; Mrs. Zada Daniels, Miss Marguerite Rawalt, Judge Lucy Howorth, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Miss Genevieve Rogers, Miss Mabel Vernon.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan were there, greeting numerous friends.

Glimpsed among the some 250 guests were Rear Adm. (ret.) Clark Howell Woodward and Mrs. Woodward, Representative and Mrs. Walt Horan, the Horans' daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Paauw; Mrs. A. H. Doddridge, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, Mrs. India Edwards, director of the Womens' Division, Democratic National Committee; Representative and Mrs. Carroll Kearns.

Still others included Representative and Mrs. E. C. Gathings, Representative and Mrs. Compton I. White, Representative and Mrs. Thomas Martin, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Miss Mabel Vernon, Representative and Mrs. Carl Albert, Representative and Mrs. Charles E. Bennett, Representative Wesley D' Ewart.

National Council Members

Several of the party's national council members came especially for the festive get-together. Among them were: Mrs. George T. Vickers of New Jersey, Mrs. Theodore Forbes of Maryland, and Mrs. Robert Walker of Florida and Maryland.

Serving as hostesses were: Mrs. Lucia Hanna Hadley, member of the National Council, Mrs. Dora G. Ogle and Miss Martha Souder, former national council members.

Directing a group of junior hostesses were Mrs. Richard Manning Westebbe and Mrs. Dorothy Spinks.

Women Don't Run This Country— But They Should, B. P. W. Head Says

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Women don't run the country—but they ought to start trying, two American women said today on returning from Europe.

Miss Sally Butler, international president of the Federation of Business and Professional Women, said, "Our government needs the influence of women. We think they are a little more frank and honest than men."

Miss Butler, an Indianapolis attorney, was accompanied by Dr. Sarah Rosecrans, a physician from Neelsville, Wis., who concurred in her views. They arrived on the Swedish liner Gripsholm after attending a federation conference in Helsinki, Findland.

Miss Butler said she hates to admit it, but European women know more about world affairs than the average American woman. She also said it is not true that American women boss this country.

"We own most of the money, but we don't have a proportionate say in the handling of it," she said.

As for men—

"They get there, but they don't care much how they get there."

Vacationing

Mr. Truman Is Host

State Dinner Honors Philippine President

By Elizabeth Maguire

TOP men of two nations gathered last evening for dinner at the Carlton Hotel at the invitation of President Truman. Honor guest at the state dinner was President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines, who arrived in Washington yesterday for an official visit.

Guests numbering 45 were seated around a long oval-shaped table centered with bouquets of lavender and white asters and bronze and yellow pompoms. The honor guest sat on President Truman's right, and directly across the table sat co-host Vice President Alben W. Barkley. On his right was the Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin Elizalde.

The room was air-cooled and music was furnished by the Marine Band orchestra.

Long before the dinner hour, a group of secret service men and White House aides took their posts in the lobby of the hotel. The two Presidents entered the dining room by a side entrance and waited until the last guest had arrived before going into the reception room.

After introductions, the President and his distinguished guest led the way into dinner. Members of President Quirino's party attending the dinner were the Secretary of Finance, Pio Pedrosa; the Secretary of Labor, Primitvo Lovino; a Council of State member, Jose Yulo; and the Deputy Chief of Staff, Brig. Gen. Calizto Duque.

Kentucky Charm

The Vice President arrived at the dinner in a cool white dinner jacket. In a short conversation in the Carlton lobby some one mentioned the charm of St. Louis girls, and the "Veep" observed that their charm stems from their Kentucky blood.

A preliminary reception was held in the lobby by Senator Tom Connally, the Secretary of the Treasury, John W. Snyder, and the Secretary of the Air Force, W. Stuart Symington.

Arriving simultaneously were the Chief Justice, Fred M. Vinson; the Speaker, Sam Rayburn; the Secretary of State, Dean Acheson; the Secretary of Defense, Louis A. Johnson; the Attorney General, Tom Clark; the Postmaster General, Jesse Monroe Donaldson, and the Secretary of the Interior, J. A. Krug.

Among other guests were the Secretary of Commerce, Charles Sawyer; the Secretary of Labor, Maurice J. Tobin; Senator Carl Hayden, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Senator Owen Brewster, Representative Robert L. Doughton, Representative Clarence Cannon, Representative Karl Stefan, the Secretary of the Army, Gordon Gray; the Secretary of the Navy, Francis Matthews, and Ambassador-at-Large, Philip C. Jessup.

Also, the President of the World Bank, Eugene R. Black, the United States Ambassador to the Philippines, Myron Melvin Cowen, the Assistant to the President, John R. Steelman, William D. Hassett, the Minister of the Philippines, Emilio Abello, Jose P. Melencio, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, Maj. Gen. Carl R. Gray, jr., Joseph J. O'Connell, jr., W. Walton Butterworth, Richard Ely, H. Charles Spruks, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughn, Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison and Brig. Gen. Robert B. Landry.

Guest at Blair House

President Quirino was greeted at 3 p. m. yesterday at the National Airport by President Truman, members of the Cabinet and the Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde. The two Presidents drove to Blair House, where President Quirino was an overnight guest. Today the Philippine President is to go to the Philippine Embassy where he will be the guest of Ambassador Elizalde for the remainder of his three-day visit.

A dinner will be given this evening at the Statler Hotel by President Quirino in honor of President Truman. After dinner Ambassador Elizalde will be host at a reception at the Statler, honoring his President. A luncheon will be given tomorrow by the U. S. Ambassador to the Philippines, Myron Melvin Cowen, and later in the day, at 5, the Minister of the Philippines, Emilio Abello, will entertain at a cocktail party in honor of President Quirino.

Members of the Filipino community will be received by President Quirino Wednesday at 7 at the embassy. The Philippine President will leave Washington Thursday morning at 9:30 a. m. for a two-day visit in New York. A luncheon will be given for him Thursday by Winthrop Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank, and on Friday Cardinal Spellman will entertain for him at a luncheon at the Cardinal's residence.

How to Choose Curtains

What type of curtain should I use at single, narrow, living room windows to make them look wider? By doing this, would it make a small room look smaller? I do not have Venetian blinds.
M. M. J.

One of the easiest ways to make a window seem larger is to set the curtain rod so that it extends beyond the window edge on each side. Arrange it so the ends are far enough from the window edge to allow the inside edge of the drape to just come to the outside window edge. This way the drape will hang over the wood trim and wall—rather than the window. With this, use a glass curtain. To further add to the feeling of width, use a valance or drape just over the top of the window.

In order that this treatment does not dwarf the room, use very little or no figure in the drapes. Also, using drapes which are the same or lighter value than the color in the wall will further add to the feeling of spaciousness. Very dark drapes which strongly contrast with the wall color will give a spotty effect and eliminate the light, airy feeling of a room.

About a year ago, I bought two feather pillows at what I thought was a dependable store. The pillows have been emitting an oily odor for quite a while. What do you suggest that I do to remove the odor, or do you know of any firm that would remedy the matter?
T. P.

There is a pillow renovation firm on 22nd st. which steam-cleans feathers. They say that, usually, such treatment is successful in eliminating this type of odor. They remove the feathers from the pillow, steam clean them, wash the ticking and return the feathers to the ticking. For further information, I suggest you call the firm at Republic 0112.

Is there any concern in Washington or elsewhere that sells tools and materials used in picture framing? I would appreciate any information, not only as to where I can secure tools and materials, but as to the technique and art of framing.

A check at hobby, photo supply, and department stores fails to disclose one place where picture framing supplies are sold in a kit or instructions given in the art. However, I am told it is not difficult to do and a recent article in American Home, June, 1949, issue further convinces me. The suggestions for framing a picture given in the "American Home" are completely illustrated, making them easy to follow. They suggest using an old frame, but instead you could easily use moulding purchased by the foot at lumber dealers. The moulding comes unfinished and in various sizes and shapes so you have some choice.

As for tools, a miter box would help you to cut the corners so they will fasten together at true right angles. These boxes can be purchased reasonably where woodworking tools are sold. The only other tool needed would be a hammer. As for supplies you will need moulding, a sheet of glass the size the picture is to be, (this can be cut to size at hardware stores), a piece of cardboard, heavy vellum, or illustration board for a mat, mask tape, small nails to hold the picture in the frame, picture wire and screws for hanging, a sheet of wrapping paper the size of the frame for sealing the back and glue.

Can you give me any suggestions as to what I should do in the following case: I have a foam-rubber pillow and, for some reason or other, it turns the white percale pillow slips yellow, the entire surface that touches the pillows. However, the cover of the pillow—a powder blue cotton material—remains always the same pretty shade of blue. But even the plastic covers, which I have bought for this pillow, turn yellow. Have you any idea what is the cause?
M. S.

I have discussed your problem with a firm which sells foam-rubber pillows and they tell me this is not a common complaint. As a matter of fact, they have never had one like it. Since the cover next to the pillow is not affected, it would seem the discoloration may be caused by something touching the pillow from the outside such as some preparation you use on your face or hair. At any rate, to find the solution to your trouble, I suggest that you discuss it with the firm which sold you the pillow.

PETUNIA!

A funnel is a gladsome thing
There's not a doubt about it.
For separating yolks from whites
I couldn't do without it!

Good idea, Petunia! Use a tiny funnel—and you'll find that the white slips through with ease, leaving the yolk in the top.

Mrs. Dietsche to Lead Convention Delegation

Mrs. J. Florence Dietsche will be chairman of the District of Columbia delegation to the twenty-ninth national American Legion Auxiliary convention on August 29 in Philadelphia.

There will be 1307 official delegates to the four-day convention representing more than 960,000 members of the auxiliary. Sessions will be held in Irvine Hall at the University of Pennsylvania, with Mrs. Laura Poling Goode of Portland, Oreg., national president, presiding.

National officers will be elected at the closing session on September 1. Mrs. Norman L. Sheehe of Rockford, Ill., is the only announced candidate for national president.

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—John Royal, the television executive, was in New York throughout the heat wave. And when the temperature reached 97 he said he remembered only one other day when, for him, it was warmer. It was while he was working as a reporter for the Boston Post, and the temperature climbed into the high 90's. His editor assigned him to tour the city while wearing a fur coat, gloves, muffler, galoshes and ear-muffs. Royal would ask startled observers: "Cold enough for you?" Then he entered the Hotel Terrain and asked the desk clerk: "Give me a steam-heated room, please" . . . He lost eight pounds that day, and received a bonus and 2 weeks time for recuperation.

Ed Flynn, the Democratic leader, left for California Saturday. He said, regarding the United States Senatorship here: "I was for Lehman; I am for Lehman; I'll be for Lehman."

John Gunther collected $500 a week throughout the run of "Inside USA" for the use of his title. When the musical becomes a television serial next month Gunther's fee will be 20 per cent of the royalties . . . MacKinlay Kantor, who wrote the original for "Best Years of Our Lives," has been spending most of his time for the past year with the cops of the Twenty-third Precinct in Manhattan collecting material for the new movie which Goldwyn will produce.

What About Ghost Stories?

"With a shudder and a groan, the white formless figure moved closer and closer until . . ." Some of the youngsters in the circle gathered about the storyteller shudder themselves, some put their fingers to their ears, while others seem to be enjoying every gruesome detail.

"What about ghost stories?" There's no easy yes or no answer. For all kinds of reasons, one youngster will be definitely frightened and may stay awake long after the story has been told. Others will have nightmares or show anxiety in other ways. But many will get a great "kick" out of having the chills run up and down their backs.

Parents and other adults should be alert to their audiences. Though it seems a bit on the silly side to eliminate the fun that comes to many a child from a well-told ghost story, it's important not to overstimulate youngsters for whom the supernatural is a frightening thing.

Probably the best source is a middle-of-the-road one, going easy until one is sure just how much a particular child can take. It is wise, too, not to be too realistic. One can help children both enjoy such tales and see that they can't really be true.

World War II Veteran Groups Seeking Merger

By the United Press

Negotiations are being conducted for a possible merger of the American Veteran's Committee and Amvets, the two largest veterans' organizations to grow out of World War II, it was announced last night.

A statement indorsing the proposed merger was issued by Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., (D., N. Y.), Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) and four other Congressmen, all members of AVC.

They said they had received a report from AVC National Chairman Gilbert Harrison, and that they approved the idea of a "consolidated World War II veterans organization" which would be vigilant to keep its ranks free of Communis influence.

Representatives Richard Bolling (D., Mo.), Peter W. Rodino, jr., (D., N. J.), John Blatnik, (D., Minn.) and Stephen Young, (D., O.), joined in the statement.

Slot Machines May Peril Piers

Colonial Beach, Va., Aug. 8 (Spl.). — Slot-machine operation might be grounds for revocation of permits for piers jutting from Virginia land and extending over Maryland waters, Town's Attorney George Mason, jr., said tonight.

"It's a possibility at any rate," Mason said when apprised of the revocation suggestion made by the Rev. Dr. J. L. Carrick of the First Baptist Church here.

Mason said the Town Council "theoretically" could revoke the pier construction permits on grounds slot-machine operation constitutes a nuisance. He said it would be up to the town then to prove such action constituted a nuisance, in any resulting court test.

Similar Case Thrown Out

He pointed out the town was confronted with a similar problem when prohibition prevailed in Virginia but not in Maryland in the 1930s.

When the piers were destroyed in a storm, the Town Council passed an ordinance barring issuance of permits on grounds a nuisance would be created in the form of liquor sales.

The Virginia Supreme Court, he said, tossed out the ordinance because the town had failed to establish the pier reconstruction would constitute a nuisance.

Mason also pointed out that there is a sharp conflict of opinion as to whether Virginia authorities have jurisdiction to control operations on piers jutting from the Virginia shore and extending over Maryland waters.

In 1944, Abram P. Staples, then attorney general, and now a member of the Virginia Supreme Court, wrote an opinion that Virginia authority ends and Maryland authority begins at the low-water mark on the Virginia shore.

Illegal in Virginia

However, there are court decisions holding Virginia has jurisdiction over the full length of the piers, he said.

Crux of the issue is that slot machines are illegal in Virginia but legal in Charles County, Md., just across the river from the Virginia shore.

Mason said he has not yet been asked by the Town Council to investigate slot machine operations on the controversial piers. He indicated he expected the matter to be raised at the next council meeting, Thursday.

The pier license revocation was urged by Dr. Carrick in a sermon at the First Baptist Church Sunday. He charged that Mayor Norman Brewington, the Town Council, and Westmoreland County Commonwealth's Attorney F. F. Chandler have "flouted the law they swore to enforce and have washed their hands of the matter saying there is nothing we can do."

Liquor Monopolies Of 16 States Show Heavy '48 Profits

The 16 States which operate liquor monopoly systems made a profit of $167,343,000 from them in the 12 months ended June 30, 1948, the Census Bureau reported today.

Pennsylvania, with sales of $189,368,000, made the largest profit, $38,205,000. Michigan was second with sales of $129,658,000 and net profit of $29,153,000. Virginia was third with sales of $90,807,000 and net income of $17,640,000.

West Virginia reported net sales of $45,236,000 and net income of $9,657,000.

WATCH GOLDFINCHES GATHER THISTLEDOWN

During the month of August those of you who like to take walks afield should watch for the Goldfinches. Commonly called "Wild Canaries" they are found from ocean to ocean, and their pure lemon yellow and black color makes them easily identified. These cheery little birds durwhether in flight or resting during most of the summer.

One of the unusual things about the Goldfinches is that they wait until August to start gathering nesting materials. It sems that when the brownish female builds her nest, she is very particular as she wants only the best mattress for her babies. To make the nest as soft as possible she pads it with thistledown held together with the finest of grasses and bark shreds.

Thistle plants which are covered with hundreds of prickles do not generally mature their down heads until August, so the Goldfinches seem to go merrily about their seed eating until the thistledown is ready. See if you can find a pair of Goldfinches doing their August nest building.

SKITTISH HORSE

Q. A farm boy was riding a plow horse along a country lane one morning. A small carnival had stopped for the night in a pasture beside the road. Among its attractions was a large elephant, which was chained to a stake. When the horse saw the elephant, at a distance of about 150 feet, the horse became frightened and ran, throwing the boy and injuring him. The boy sues the carnival. Is he entitled to damages?

A. Those who keep nondomestic animals of a naturally ferocious nature are responsible for injuries caused by such beasts. The theory of the boy's suit is that the elephant being a wild animal, its owner is responsible for injuries caused by it. But in this case the injury wasn't caused by the elephant. It was caused by the horse's fear of a large animate object to which it was unaccustomed. No fault could be placed on the carnival for this. The boy loses.

Will the Nats Wind Up In the Dog House?

John Taylor of 3300 Plyers Mill rd., Kensington, Md., thinks that his friend, Tru, of the same address, is Washington's most loyal baseball fan.

Tru is for the Nats, win, lose or draw. Whether they're in the first division or diving toward the cellar, Tru is beside his television set for every home game.

And it's not that he's merely a television enthusiast, either. Howdy Doody, Milton Berle and the other top programs just make him yawn. When the ball game is over, Tru loses interest and goes to sleep. All he's interested in is the Nats.

In case you're wondering about Tru's rather unusual name, it's like this: His master, J. G. Booher, got Tru on election day and named the pup after the President.

CONVERSATION PIECE

After recounting the adventures of others who find slick salesmen at their doors, I am now able to do a first-person report on such an incident.

My saleslady took the initiative without so much as a "hello," and the dialogue went like this:

She: (briskly) And how many children do we have here?

Me: Who wants to know?

She: Why, I want to know.

Me: And who are you?

She: I'm the lady with the free gift for you.

Me: If you have a free gift for me, why do you have to know how many children I have?

She: It's a gift of a free picture of your children.

Me: You give away a free picture of my children? And I don't have to buy anything to get it?

She: Well—not exactly. You see, I'm selling coupons, which entitle you to get your picture taken at . . .

Me: It's been nice talking to you.

She: You mean you don't want the free gift?

Me: What free gift? If I have to buy something to get it, then it's not free—is it?

She: Well, not exactly. But . . .

Me: Good day. Please don't think this hasn't been a pleasure just because it hasn't.

Our enterprising swain adds: "Don't try to figure it out; just print it. She'll understand."

RULE REVIEW

The co-pilot of our family car is going to be hard to get along with for the next few days. She caught me in a mistake.

She said I shouldn't have driven to the left of the safety zone; I said it was okay because the zone was unoccupied at the time.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, traffic boss, was called on to referee. I came out second-best.

"The penalty is less when the safety zone is unoccupied," he informed me, "but it's illegal either way."

While I was at it, I brushed up on rules pertaining to loading platforms. (Don't confuse the two; a loading platform is just what it sounds like, but a safety zone is merely some lines or markers on the roadway.)

If there is no sign or arrow ordering you to "Keep to the Right," you may pass a loading platform on the left when the other traffic lanes are occupied.

But if there's no traffic in the right-hand lanes, you're expected to use them—even if you're not specifically forbidden to pass that particular loading platform on the left.

Of course if the sign orders you to keep to the right of the platform, you must do so at all times—even in making a left turn. Stay in the lane immediately to the right of the platform and make your turn (giving proper signal) when traffic permits.

At those platforms where it is permissible to pass on the left, all left-turners must get into the left (car-track) lane. At these intersections, left turns are not permitted from the right of the platform.

It may sound complicated at first reading, but it really isn't. It's the same procedure your common sense would call for if there weren't any rules.

Curbs on Cotton Production Seen in 1950

Production controls for cotton next year are foreshadowed by the report on this year's cotton production issued yesterday.

The report estimated that this year's harvest, as of August 1, gave promise of 14,805,000 bales, compared with 14,868,000 bales last year. A bale is 500 pounds gross weight.

Injury to the growing cotton due to unfavorable weather and heavy boll weevil inroads in the Central and Eastern States was indicated by the report.

Although 14 per cent more acres were planted this year than last, the prospects are that the crop will be 0.4 per cent smaller.

Cotton growers are assured the second-best cash return in history from the crop. Assuming cotton and cottonseed bring no more than Government price guarantees, the total income will be around $2,440,000,000. The largest income on record was received for the 1948 crop—estimated at $2,641,000,000.

Because this year's crop promises to be larger than required to meet market requirements, plus a surplus carried over from last year of about 5,600,000 bales, production control seems to be inevitable. Such controls consist of acreage restrictions and marketing quotas.

Passerby Catches Baby Falling From Window

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Arnold J. Davis, 26, was strolling by a residence here today when he glanced up.

The baby, Robert Wellever, was treated for a slight cut on his eyebrow.

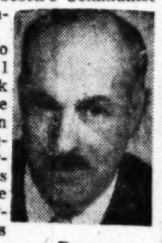
Negro Actors to Trail Robeson

By Drew Pearson

A theatrical company of American Negroes will tour the Scandinavian countries next month to offset Paul Robeson's Communist-sponsored barnstorming.



Pearson

The Negro players will present Henrik Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" in Denmark, Sweden and Norway, and thus demonstrate that all American Negroes aren't downtrodden, but can attain the same educational and cultural heights as other Americans.

This good-will tour was arranged by the Norwegian Embassy and Howard University without any prompting from the State Department. Twenty-one students and three instructors from Howard University's drama department will make the trip, most of the expenses being paid by Blevins Davis, American philanthropist, who also brought an American company to Denmark to play "Hamlet."

The idea of sending Negro players to Scandinavia was suggested by Ivan Jacobsen, staff member of the Norwegian Embassy, after he happened to see the Howard University drama department in action. He felt that Paul Robeson had not painted a true picture of the American Negroes, and so on his own initiative promoted the tour as a gesture of people-to-people friendship.

Prediction: This will do almost as much good as some phases of the North Atlantic Pact.

Seen and heard in the Senate restaurant: Senator Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, newly appointed Attorney General, finished lunch and called for his check. The waiter brought it. This was the first day the new District of Columbia sales tax went into effect.

"The tax should be 3 cents, not 2," the Senator advised the waiter. "You've undercharged me."

Since Senator McGrath wrote the sales tax law for the District of Columbia, the waiter didn't argue. The man who, as Attorney General, will be responsible for enforcing the law, handed him the extra penny.

Whispered on the Senate floor: The Senate buzzed with news of the appointment of Attorney General Clark to the Supreme Court and of Senator McGrath to be Attorney General—especially Senators James Kem of Missouri, Clark's bitter critic, and Homer Ferguson of Michigan, who has been under investigation.

Leaning forward, Senator Bob Taft whispered in Kem's ear: "We're going to make you and Homer the reception committee for the new Supreme Court Justice."

Backstage With the GOP

The backstage story of what happened inside the Republican National Committee shows how bitterly the Taft-Dewey forces are still divided.

The man chiefly responsible for Guy Gabrielson's hairbreadth election as chairman was Taft's close friend, hefty Republican Clarence Brown of Ohio.

It was Brown, working closely with Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska, who induced Abel Shotwell of Nebraska to switch to Gabrielson, thus clinching a majority of the committee's 102 votes for the New Jerseyite.

In doing so, Brown definitely ruled himself out as a compromise candidate for the chairmanship.

At one point Taft forces were flabbergasted at a Dewey offer, made by Mason Owlett of Pennsylvania, to support Taft's close friend, Brown, provided Gabrielson agreed to step out.

It was tempting bait, but Brown didn't bite.

"I am not a candidate," he told Owlett. "I have come out for Gabe and I won't let him down."

Mississippi Vetoes Halleck

At one point when Indiana's Charlie Halleck was proposed as a compromise by Deweyities, Perry Howard, Negro national committeeman from Mississippi, threatened to resign.

"I can't face my colored friends and tell them I have been a party to any such compromise," Howard announced at the secret session. "I am opposed to Charlie Halleck and will step out if he is chosen as our leader."

Halleck's friends scoffed at rumors he is anti-Negro and insisted that Perry Howard was playing politics for his friend, Bob Taft.

However, another committeeman referred to "Drew Pearson's" report that the Indiana Congressman kept a stable of Cadillac limousines despite his modest Congressman's salary.

"If Charlie Halleck were elected he'd have five Cadillac limousines around national headquarters," commented one Taft rooter.

However, when Halleck was approached by Deweyities he flatly refused to be a candidate unless Gabrielson dropped out of the race and he was to be elected unanimously.
